High Truck Prices? "NEGATORY!" PETER POLLEN FORD

EVENING OUT WAS SMASHING

CALGARY (CP) — Jim Dickie, 19, was driving home early last Saturday when he was in a traffic accident. And then another. And another.

The vehicle in front of his suddenly slowed. When Dickie applied his brakes to avoid a collision, his car skidded and smashed into a guardrail.

Dickie received cuts to head and legs. Police drove him downtown where he made a statement.

A patrol car was then ordered to take him to hospital for treatment.

Within seconds of leaving police headquarters, a motorist shot through a red light.

"I couldn't find the breath to say anything," Dickie said Monday. "I just hung on for dear life."

The chase ended with the patrol car ramming the pursued vehicle — twice.

"I wrenched my neck in that episode," Dickie said.

After being told he would have to wait an hour to see a doctor, he decided to go home. He caught a cab outside.

"I had just finished telling the driver my troubles when a car went through a stop sign directly in front of us," he said.

"We had no chance of avoiding a pileup and there I was, smack in the middle of my third crash of the night."

The taxi came to rest on a lawn, facing backwards. Dickie received a bump on the head and bruises on both hands.

Someone called a cab to drive him home. After some persuasion, he agreed to take it.

VAGRANCY, PORNOGRAPHY, SUBVERSIVES

Police Chiefs Talk Tough

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Canadian police chiefs want vagrancy laws restored, restricted access to "subversive" literature and pornography and an outright ban on politically subversive groups.

Jack Machan, president of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police, said in an interview Monday such steps are necessary "to ensure we continue with a free society."

Machan said Parliament made a mistake in 1972 by repealing certain sections of the Vagrancy provisions of the Criminal Code which made it an offence for someone to wander about penniless or to beg for money in a public place.

"We strongly objected to the move at the time," said Machan.

Machan said police generally want a much tougher stand taken on pornography and added books that deal with subversive political thought should also be subject to a kind of censorship review.

"I'm not saying we should censor all the literature entirely. Rather it should be available only for reading by adults and not just available to any person as is the case now," he said.

Machan said police also want strong legislation to deal more effectively with groups "whose mandate is the overthrow of the government."

Asked if that means a group such as the Marxist-Leninist Party of Canda, he replied, "Yes."

"There should be recognition of the group if its intent is to disturb the kind of society Canadians wish to live in," he said.

And if that is the aim of the group it should be outlawed, he said.

"We're talking about a free society but in that there is a requirement for us all to live in a law framework."

"Freedom is fine and it's what we're all after but there has got to be discipline. If there is no discipline there is no free society. We'd have anarchy."

Machan said the CACP can't expect all that it wants or asks but feels confident the government will restore the Vagrancy section.

Under the section, police had the authority to arrest anyone without any apparent means of support and who were unable to justify their presence in the place where they were found.

The section also prohibited begging from door to door and in public places and required a prostitute or night walker to "give a good account of herself" if stopped.

Machan said the law was an effective tool to clear the streets of crime.

Police now are powerless to act if they see suspicious persons on the street, he said, and the situation is particularly critical in congested metropolitan areas.

Machan acknowledged civil liberties groups would be up in arms if any of the legislative changes he proposes go through.

"But I think more people would be in favor of the changes than there would be against."

He said the CACP has a responsibility to speak out against laws senior police officials believe to be wrong.

But, he agreed police should not write the laws.

"If it came to that it'd be terrible," he said. "I think we might be just a little too tough."

MONTREAL FLIGHTS DISRUPTED

Vince paquette, a federal transport department spokesman, said there were delays of 15 to 20 minutes on some flights leaving the airport and on others arriving from Toronto where controllers were maintaining a work-to-rule campaign.

Air Canada said some of its planes were held up for 20 to 30 minutes.

Paquette confirmed that one air traffic supervisor has been suspended. He declined to identify the man or to give the reason for the suspension, but said an internal investigation was being held into the matter.

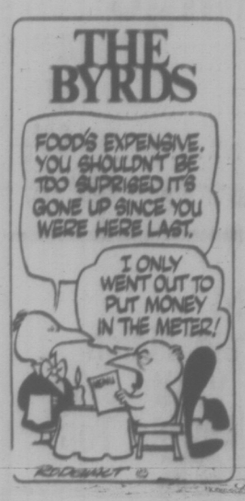
Crisis Talks in U.K. On Air Strike Threat



Times News Services

LONDON — Airport workers whose threatened strike would disrupt air service to more than one million passengers were called to a meeting today to discuss their grievances with Britain's top government labor official.

The 850-member Air Control Assistants union voted Monday 502-87 to strike for four days from midnight (4 p.m. PDT) Thursday until midnight Monday in support of their demands for a salary increase.

Employment Secretary Albert Booth summoned the leaders of the union, as well as members of management — the Civil Aviation Authority — to new talks.

Meanwhile, spokesman for Victoria travel agents differ on what's in store for local travellers bound for the U.K. if a strike set for Thursday by British air traffic controllers goes ahead.

Andy Blaney, of Blaney Travel Service Ltd., said no official word has yet been given but he expects airlines will fly passengers from Canada to Amsterdam, providing transport by train and ferry to London from there.

Blaney said official confirmation is expected later today.

Ian Dykes, manager of Featherstone Travel Service Ltd., however, said the Amsterdam airport may be too busy to handle any extra traffic.

"I believe the airlines will do the best they can, given the circumstances," he said.

Sue Bennett, manager of Budget Travel Ltd. said her main concern is the 171 clients they now have in Britain. Arrangements have been made to transport them to either Amsterdam or Brussels, or even Paris.

The company has 100 people leaving on a charter flight from Victoria on Sept. 1. If the strike is in effect they will be flown to either of the three continental airports and the return flight will bring back those now in Britain.

Blaney estimated that about 60 or 70 of his company's clients, booked for charter flights, will be affected if the strike takes place this weekend, as well as another 20 booked on regular flights.

A charter, leaving Thursday, will be in the air when the strike is due to take place, he said.

Domestic and overseas airlines say in event of a strike they expect at least half of the 3,000 daily flights through British air space to be hit by cancellations or long delays.

Representatives of the 1,400 air traffic controllers and the 850 assistants will continue meeting through Thursday to sort out what the controllers should or should not do to avoid accusations of strike breaking.

Kerster Ouster Attempt Fails

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

NDP members of the legislature's public accounts committee failed today in a move to have Social Credit backbencher George Kerster (Coquitlam) suspended from the legislature.

At the end of hearings into Kerster's involvement and three claims against the Insurance Corp. of B.C., Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre) told the committee it is obvious Kerster was involved in a conflict of interest in the cases and had used his position as a government MLA to intimidate ICBC officials.

The claims involved one by Surrey Dodge Ltd., a company once run by Kerster and to which he still has financial ties and two by New Westminster driver Leslie Wood.

Wood's vehicle was financed by First Charter Financial Corporation, a New Westminster company that has made at least two loans to Kerster.

In testifying before the committee, Kerster described one of the directors of First Charter, W. H. Butler, as a personal friend.

Kerster also said that the financial company had made him loans to purchase a car and to buy property.

Lauk said those ties placed the MLA in a conflict of interest situation when he approached ICBC to press for a

Ottawa Plans Controls On Abusers of CBs

OTTAWA (CP) — The communications department is designing regulatory changes for citizens band (CB) radios in an attempt to clamp down on the "hard-core abusers" of radio airwaves, a department official said today.

The changes will be designed to provide tougher measures to deal with CB operators who monopolize the airwaves, use the wrong frequencies, deliberately and repeatedly disrupt the airwaves or use illegal amounts of power for their sets, the official said.

As well, tougher measures will be introduced to clamp down on the estimated 60,000 to 120,000 persons across the country who are illegally operating CB radio sets without a licence, he said. There how are more than 600,000 licenced CB operators.

The regulations are expected to be introduced in October or November, the official said.

The department also announced that starting Jan. 1, 1978, new CB licences will only be issued to operators who have radio equipment meeting tighter technical requirements.

However, CB operators, who have older equipment made under less stringent regulations, will be able to renew their licences without buying the newer equipment, the official said. About 90 per cent of the CB equipment now in use was made under the old regulations.

The tighter technical requirements were introduced to try to reduce the problem of terference CB radios can cause with television and ordinary radio sets, the official said.

RAIN SETS HYDRO POLES ON FIRE

A circuit failure cut power to parts of Langford and Colwood between 7 a.m. and 9 a.m., a B.C. Hydro spokesman reported.

Power was also out in Victoria West and a number of scattered locations.

The problems, which began around 1 a.m., were attributed to the light rain after a long, dry spell.

Dust gathers on insulators and this can sometimes cause an arc back to the pole, said the B.C. Hydro spokesman. The dust acts as a conductor.

Sebastian Cabot Dies at 59

Sebastian Cabot, the portly, bushy-bearded actor best known for his role as the benevolent butler in the television series Family Affair, died early today. He was 59.

He suffered a stroke, his third in three years, and died at the Deep Cove cottage he and his wife Kathleen have owned since 1963.

Cabot's last public appearance was in December at the McPherson Playhouse as part of a benefit for preservation of the White Cliffs of Dover.

The rotund actor, who had a reputation as a gourmet and collector of cars, had two strokes in 1974 which left his right side paralyzed and resulted in a loss of speech and memory.

In an interview last November with Max Low of the Times, he said he didn't think he would ever get his voice back "but I would still like to work."

He hoped someone would write a non-speaking part for him, "but nobody has."

Funeral services for Cabot will take place in Los Angeles where he and his wife have owned a home since 1960.

Cabot played the urbane Dr. Cyril Hyatt in the TV series Checkmate from 1959 to 1962. However, he was perhaps best known for his role as French, the staid but soft-hearted butler in Family Affair, a series about the trial of raising a family in New York City.

He was last seen as the English-accented host of the short-lived television anthology Ghost Story several seasons back.

"I went from Checkmate to Family Affair," he onte said. "I was a brain in Checkmate and on Family Affair I was a sweet idiot."

"Sabby" Cabot was born in London on July 6, 1918. He left school at 14 to work as a garage helper. Later, he became a chef, because of what he called "internal urgings" and because his father pushed him into it.

He was a gourmet who loved rich foods like tripe, eel and sweetbreads and "couldn't care less for steak."

"I like to think of myself as a rather dashing figure, like Falstaff," he said at one time. "I've weighed 280 pounds since I was about 20 years old and I like it."

Cabot became interested in the theatre while chauffering British actor Frank Pettingell and talked his way into a repertory company by faking a long string of respectable credits. He soon began to get parts as a movie extra.

His first London stage role was in A Bell for Adano in 1945. Two years later, he came to the United States to appear in John Gielgud's New York production of Love for Love.

His English movies included The Captain's paradise, Ivanhoe, Romeo and Juliet and Othello.

His other motion pictures included Seven Thieves, The Time Machine and The Family Jewels. He also had a long string of narration credits, including the Sword in The Stone, The Jungle Book, and Winnie The Pooh and Tigger Too, for Walt Disney.

Cabot is survived by his wife and three children — Annette, born in 1941, Christopher Pierre, born in 1943 and Yvonne, born in 1957.

10 KILLED IN BUS HIJACKING

Times News Services

MEXICO CITY — Mexican troops stormed a hijacked bus Monday and the two terrorists aboard started shooting passengers and exploded a hand grenade, killing 10 persons.

"It was butchery," said Alfredo Reyes, one of the 10 passengers wounded. "People fell like flies."

"We thought we were all going to be blown up when one of the men pulled the pin on the grenade and it blew up on his chest," said Primitivo Solis Romero, another passenger.

The hijackers, who identified themselves as members of the People's Armed Revolutionary Front, sought the release of two brothers who kidnapped U.S. Consul Terrance Leonhardy in Guadalajara on May 4, 1973, police said.

Ferry Extended to Charlottes

Energy Minister Jack Davis said Monday that cabinet decided to extend B.C. Ferries service to the Queen Charlotte Islands in an order-in-council passed 10 days ago.

He said the B.C. Ferries cruise ship Queen of Prince Rupert will be the vessel used to provide a once-a-week service from Prince Rupert to Massett.

He said a smaller scale service will begin at the end of September, and that the Queen of Prince Rupert will begin its runs when Massett has a large enough dock, which could be built within 12 to 18 months.

Davis said that Ocean Falls will be added to the vessel's run in October. Bella Bella was also recently added to the regular run to Prince Rupert from Kelsey Bay.

The minister said a decision has not yet been made on whether to extend regular service to Stewart or Bella Coola.

Graham Lea (NDP — Prince Rupert), his party's transportation critic, said in an interview that he is very pleased that the Queen Charlotte Island would get increased service, but said he felt Stewart and Bella Coola are being short-changed.

In a memo Aug. 11 to Charles Gallagher, general manager of the ferry corporation, Davis said that funding for the government-owned company will be increased to $43.6 million from $36 million to allow the route expansion.

Davis said further details will be worked out at a ferries corporation board meeting Saturday.

U.S. Aims to Split Corporate Farms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. interior department, hoping to save the family farm, is proposing regulations that would force huge corporate interests in 17 states to sell more than a million acres in the arid western United States.

The regulations, which would go into effect in 90 days unless blocked by lawsuits, would require corporations, investors and other large landowners to sell property they hold in excess of amounts allowed in a little-enforced 1902 law.

The law was passed to place a 160-acre limit on the property a landowner may irrigate from federal water projects.

In announcing the proposal Monday, Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus noted that Congress designed water projects worth billions of dollars "primarily to place small farmers on the land." He said the new regulations are designed to carry out that congressional directive.

Officials said they expect the rules to be challenged by landowning interests.

For more than 20 years the federal Bureau of Reclamation has financed water projects that convert marginal land into some of the most valuable agricultural acreage in the U.S. But critics have maintained that large corporations and absentee owners benefit most from the policy.

INUIT CLOSE QUEBEC OFFICE

INOUCDJOUAC, Que. (CP) — About 100 Inuit in this far northern community closed down a provincial government office Monday during a demonstration against Quebec's language policy, a provincial government employee has confirmed.

Richard Chenier said in a telephone interview from this village on the eastern shore of Hudson Bay that demonstrators lowered a Quebec flag in front of the office "in a very military fashion" and boarded up the door.

"It was all very calm, almost solemn," he said. "They said we had to go until the Quebec government changes Bill 101."

Chenier said he planned to meet the village council, whose members headed the protest, but the government office would remain closed until he received further instructions from Quebec City.

Four civil servants are employed in the office to serve the village of 550 and neighboring communities.

The demonstration at Inoucdjouac followed the annual meeting of the Northern Quebec Inuit Association (NQIA) during the weekend on Belcher Islands, Northwest Territories.

PIDGEON CRITICAL

SANTA MONICA (AP) — Actor Walter Pidgeon, debonaire star of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's golden era, has lapsed into critical condition with a blood clot on his lung, a hospital spokesman says.

Pidgeon, 78, was recovering from surgery he underwent last week for a blood clot in the brain when the new clot was discovered in his lung on Monday.

Lauk said the fact Kerster at one point spent over four hours in the office of ICBC vice-president Norman Bortnick, insisting that the corporation finalize a decision on the Wood case, proved Kerster had used intimidation.

Bortnick told the committee last week that the decision to pay the six-month old Wood claims had been made because of Kerster's visit, but denied it was made under pressure.

Bortnick said the claims were paid, despite recommendations to the contrary by adjusters, because ICBC had mishandled the case.

Lauk's motion, defeated by an 8-to-6 vote, was that Kerster be suspended from the House "for a period of not less than one month."

Lauk also said the committee should report to the legislature that guidelines are necessary for Crown corporations which must deal with MLAs.

Government members on the committee laughed when Lauk read his motion.

"You've got to be kidding," said Lyle Kahl (SC — Esquimalt).

"You're going to tie your credibility to that?" asked Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf when Bill King (NDP — Revelstoke-Slocan) seconded the motion.

Insulation Tax May End—Davis

The B.C. government may soon remove its seven per cent sales tax on insulation materials, Energy Minister Jack Davis said Monday.

Davis said he's recommended to cabinet that the tax be removed even though it will mean a $2 million loss in revenue to the province.

The minister said an expression of intent to remove the tax is one of the conditions of a federal government program that will see grants of up to $350 made to householders who wish to insulate their homes.

Other conditions attached to the program, which is designed to conserve energy, include the lowering of provincial highway speed limits to 55 mph; a ban on bulk metering of energy in multi-unit dwellings, and an adoption of building codes, for new housing issued before 1978, that contain thermal insulation standards equal to National Housing Act-financed buildings.

Full details of the federal program are to be released Sept. 1.

Davis said he can't predict insulation sales tax, but indicated the government is keen to qualify for the federal program.

The minister said, however, that if the program goes ahead, and B.C. is a part of it, he would like to see B.C. Hydro administering it in the province.

Ottawa's current plans call for the program to be run out of offices in Montreal.

But Davis said that the federal grants could easily be disbursed by Hydro which has its own program now underway to assist customers in insulating their homes.

the weather

Moisture laden air continues to stream in from the Pacific, spilling over the coast mountains to bring cooler moist conditions to interior communities today. Rain will advance steadily eastward across the interior reaching into the Kootenays this afternoon. Showers will linger over the province behind the system with the odd thundershower developing over the interior. Unsettled weather is in store for the next few days as a series of Pacific disturbances press in towards the coast.

Canada-U.S. Union Good for the Soul?

By CLAUDE ADAMS
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — L. Craig Schoonmaker, an earnest young New Yorker, has launched a grass-roots campaign to convince Americans and Canadians that they should join in a political union "for reasons of the soul."

This peaceful annexation of Canada by the U.S., forming the "United States of Canada" those citizens would all be called Canadians, is the key goal of Schoonmaker's fledgling Expansionist Party.

The 32-year-old political science graduate, who operates a mimeograph machine in his apartment, claims his mail from Canada runs four-to-one in favor of the idea.

And yesterday, Schoonmaker boosted an important leap forward when a Washington newspaper, the 400,000-circulation Star, made him the subject of a front-page interview.

"After only five months of operation and the front page of The Star, that's not bad," he said in a telephone interview from New York.

Specifically, Schoonmaker feels that a federal union of English-speaking Canada and the U.S. has become an attractive idea now that Quebec is threatening to break away. However, Quebec should also be invited to join the USC, he added.

He quotes two Canadian polls, one by Maclean's magazine in 1964 and one by the Toronto Star in 1967, which showed that a significant number of respondents in both Canada and the U.S. are warm to the idea of annexation.

"Canada is not a very strong central union and there's a resentment in the west of Canada that eastern Canada — including Quebec — exploits them."

Schoonmaker explained in his interview with The Star that west-to-east trade within Canada is stricken with problems far more serious than north-south trade with the U.S.

"But mostly it's for reasons of the soul," he said in a later interview, expanding on his remarks. "The world is a very dangerous place and I want it to be less dangerous. One small step would be to obliterate the border between the U.S. and Canada."

Schoonmaker, who works as a free-lance processing machine operator, has little first-hand knowledge of Canda. He occasionally reads Canadian newspapers and magazines, and corresponds with sympathetic Canadians.

His only link is a great-grandmother who was raised in Quebec, "in a small town called Keniman Denogami? or something."

To critics who accuse him of idle dreaming, he responds that his mail from Canada — letters from every province except Prince Edward Island — is overwhelmingly in favor. But he won't give out statistics, "because I don't want to get drawn into the numbers game."

The Schoonmaker scenario has Quebec separating within two years. Confronted by a fragmented nation, Ottawa initiates talks with Washington. The individual provinces then hold referendums on the question of joining the U.S.

The name America would be scrapped, Schoonmaker said, "since it offends people and is no longer geographically accurate now anyway, with Hawaii in the union."

He explains that there are other compelling reasons for forming the United States of Canada. "Your speech is indistinguishable from mine, and great cultural assimilation already exists.

"It's been also pretty well established that the cultural differences within the U.S. are at least as great as those between the U.S. and Canada.

"Also, it's been shown that Canadians invest more capital in the U.S. than vice versa, on a per capita basis."

Would Canada agree to hand over it's vast and untapped natural resouurces to the U.S.? "Look," he said. "Resources which are undeveloped do not exist for all practical purposes. Anyway, the profits don't go to people but to corporations. One thing that would happen is that consumer prices in what is now Canada would go down."

Surveying the Quebec situation, Schoonmaker said there is little likelihood of a civil war should the province separate because "a lot of Canadians would like to get rid of Quebec, frankly."

In any case, the United States would guarantee that the democratic wishes of Quebecers are honored.

China Talks Cautious, Correct

Special to The Times

PEKING — In an atmosphere that was cautious, courteous and correct, U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance began talks on Monday with Chinese officials which marked the first high-level contact between the Carter administration and the Peoples Republic.

The first session of talks Monday afternoon was devoted solely to a two-and-a-half hour briefing by Vance regarding U.S. policy toward Europe, Asia and the Middle East and the U.S. position on global issues. State department spokesman Hodding Carger said the Chinese asked no questions even though Vance said they should feel free to interrupt him at any time.

The two sides continued their consideration of international issues today and probably won't begin discussing Sino-U.S. relations until Wednesday morning. Vance's the discussions is Chinese host and opposite number in Foreign Minister Huang Hua even though former U.S. secretary of state Henry Kissinger always dealt with either Premier Chou En-lai or vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping. The Chinese government's choice of Huang Hua to head the Chinese side is diplomatically correct, however, since he is Vance's equal in rank.

Vance arrived in Peking only two hours after the Chinese news agency had released a portion of a 10-day old speech by Hua Kuo-feng repeating China's determination to "liberate" Taiwan and its demand that the United States sever all diplomatic and military ties with that island before there are diplomatic relations between Peking and Washington.

One Chinese official told U.S. journalists in the Vance party that the timing of the release of that section of the speech, made Chairman Hua at the just-completed Communist party congress, was coincidental.

PEKING HITS SOVIETS

WASHINGTON (WP) — Peking's leadership told a prominent American visitor last month that China and the United States "must use joint efforts in dealing with the (Soviet) polar bear."

That blunt language was coupled with criticism of the United States for pursuing an "appeasement policy" toward the Soviet Union, according to the visitor, retired Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt, former chief of U.S. naval operations.

Transcripts and summaries of Zumwalt's July conversations with Chinese leaders were released to The Washington Post. They include talks with China's senior vice-premier, Li Hsien-nine, and with Foreign Minister Huang Hua.

Li was named one of the Chinese Communist Party's four deputy chairmen last week by the 11th Party Congress.

The Zumwalt transcripts contain blunter language about parallel American-Chinese interests in checkmating the Soviet Union than either Peking or Washington ever officially admits. Public transcripts of any private talks with Chinese leaders are a rarity.

These records, Zumwalt said, were made by his daughter Ann, a Catholic University graduate who accompanied him and served as note-taker.

Zumwalt, a critic of past American policy on Soviet detente, or relaxation of tension, was one of a series of recent visitors welcomed to China as hard-liners on relations with the Soviet Union.

What a Difference

What a difference an election makes! A party that was once in opposition is now in government, and suddenly black is white. The former cabinet is now in the opposition benches, and suddenly night is day.

Take, for example, the case of the Mineral Land Tax Act — a bill passed by the then-NDP government in 1973 with the aim of giving the provincial government far more money than it had previously been receiving from mining operations on Crown land.

In the three years it was in operation, the act led to bills totalling $39.6 million for the mining companies. But, not surprisingly, the companies weren't terribly impressed with the whole thing and decided to try to take the matter to court to get out of paying.

All the time this was going on the NDP stoutly defended the bill, saying it was one step to allow the people of the province their fair share from resource development, and represented a perfectly fair formula, and certainly did not deserve the kicks it was taking from the mining companies.

The Socreds, then in oppositon, were attacking the bill, complaining it was just another NDP step to ruin the mining industry in B.C., blaming it for decreases in exploration and development.

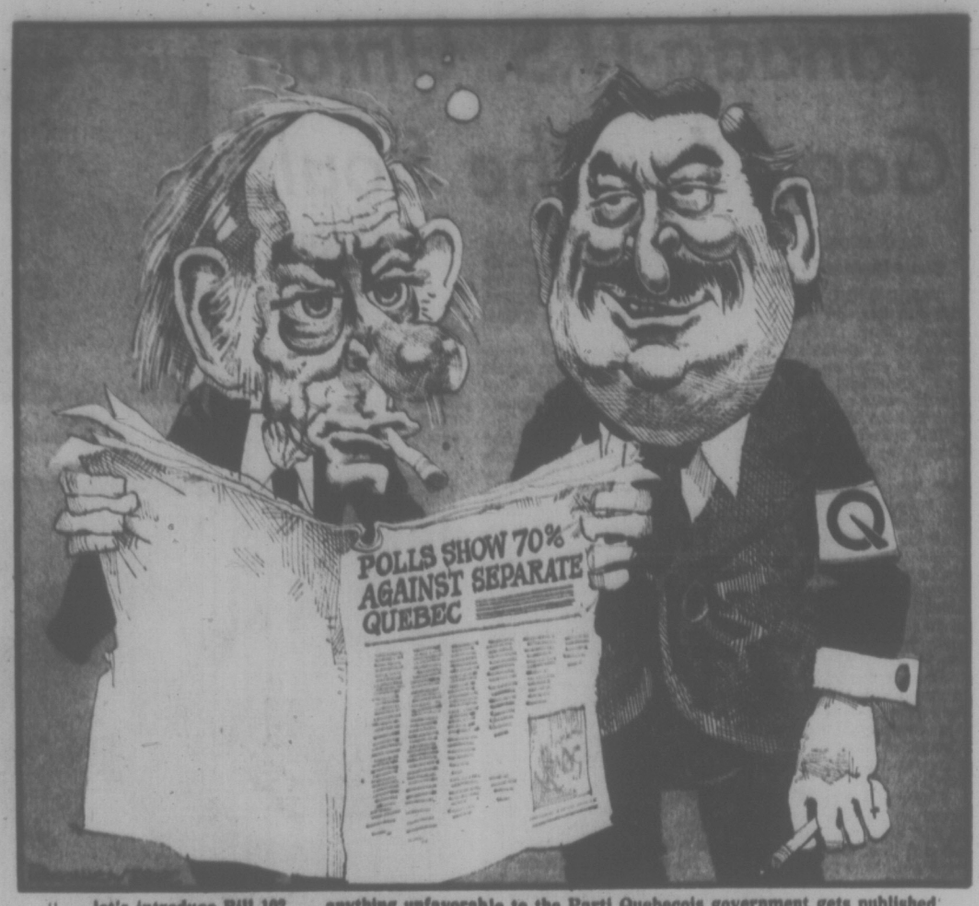
Then came the election. The Socreds took power. They instituted an entirely new system of mining taxes, but there was still that little matter of the $39.6 million from 1974, 1975 and 1976. The companies were still planning to proceed with their law suit.

So what do the Socreds do? Why, they introduce a bill that will fix up the loopholes in the act, and they make it retroactive so the mining companies don't stand a chance of winning their court case. The government is assured of its money.

If the bill was such a horrendous piece of legislation in the first place, one might think the Socreds should forget the whole thing and let the companies keep the money. But that would require a consistency unheard of in B.C. politics.

To cap off the absurdity of the whole affair, the NDP now is firmly opposing the Socreds' bill and saying the case should be allowed to proceed to trial. One cannot imagine a good reason for this sudden change of heart on the part of Dave Barrett and Company. If the bill was good when passed, surely it is good now, and the companies should not be allowed to avoid it through technicalities.

However, neither the Socreds nor the NDP have ever been known to allow their principles to stand in the way of an opportunity to try to make political points.



"... let's introduce Bill 102 ... anything unfavorable to the Parti Quebecois government gets published only in ancient Greek ..."

Questions About Jails

The recent strike by provincial jail guards in Manitoba raised in that province several important questions — not, surprisingly, about the right to strike of jail guards and other public servants but about the objects and functioning of the prison system.

The strike caught the provincial corrections ministry by surprise, but the ministry moved quickly to cope until the 500 guards returned to work — a matter of several days. First, it closed three of its nine provincial jails, releasing as many of the prisoners as possible, transferring the rest to one of the remaining six institutions.

Second, it brought in RCMP and other policemen to do the jobs of the jail guards at the institutions that stayed open. And third, it tried to discharge as many prisoners as possible to keep down the workload during the strike. It was apparently remarkably successful in this, finding it could discharge dozens of prisoners in the belief (seemingly justified) that they would pose no real danger to the public.

The main question that Manitobans are asking is: why were those prisoners in jail in the first place? If they could be discharged perfectly easily and safely when a surprise strike came along, why were Manitoba taxpayers paying $17,000 per year per prisoner to keep them in jail? Similarily, what function are the three institutions performing if they can be closed down so expeditiously in the face of labor problems?

These are questions that officials of the attorney-general's ministry here in B.C. should be examining now — not waiting until a strike or other emergency brings them to the fore.

No one is saying that all prisoners should be discharged; clearly there are in our society some violent and dangerous persons who cannot be let loose to roam the streets. But apparently none of the Manitoba prisoners discharged in the wake of the strike belonged to this group.

The conclusion must be that they were "nuisance prisoners" — men being kept in jail because they were unwilling or unable to pay fines, or because they repeatedly committed petty offences or nonviolent offences against property.

Surely we have in our society better — and cheaper — ways to deal with our nuisances. Restitution (in the case of property offences) or community work service orders are experiments being tried as alternatives to jail sentences. But even with those experiments, how many men would we find in our provincial jails whom we would let out tomorrow if the jail guards went on strike?

BRUCE HUTCHISON

The Lonely Canadian

Now that Prime Minister Trudeau can relax a little after a year of strain, public and private, he may find time for some light summer reading. Perhaps he will reread, with a wistful sigh, the opening paragraph of his own book since it explains, or at least illuminates, the success, the failure and the continuing gamble of a career unique in Canada's experience.

Exactly a decade ago, in August, 1967, the apprentice of government wrote that "the only constant factor to be found in my thinking over the years has been opposition to accepted opinions. Had I applied this principle to the stock market I might have made a fortune. I chose to apply it to politics and it led me to power — a result I had not really desired or even expected."

In those last halcyon days then known as Trudeaumania, he may not have desired power but now he commands and enjoys it, a power unchallenged by anyone except a fellow French-Canadian, Rene Levesque. If power does not always corrupt, it must change its temporary custodian and Trudeau is not the same man who first descended on a bedazzled nation rather like a visitor from some distant planet in his personal flying saucer. He is a sadder and, presumably, a wiser man.

The nation, too, has changed, but not as he intended. Nothing has gone according to his plans and hopes in Canada or anywhere else. Almost everything has gone in the opposite direction and yesterday's accepted opinions are today's nonsense.

Nation Changed

What opinions does he now hold and what does he oppose after his nine years of power? We have a right to ask that question but are unlikely to get a clear answer from a man who understands that none of the vital questions will be answered in his time.

All we know about the real man behind the public smile or frown is that a strange conjunction of events has already made him one of the most important figures in our history.

It could be convincingly argued, indeed, that no predecessor since John A. Macdonald, the nation's chief architect, possessed Trudeau's power to maintain or split it — not because he is necessarily qualified for his task, but because he happens to be here at the moment of supreme crisis and, whether we like him or not, we have found no alternative. In a weak government and a weaker parliamentary opposition he stands alone, a creature sui generis, infuriating to his enemies, baffling to his friends, understood by no one, possibly not even by himself.

Both man and nation are in the fell grip of circumstances and neither yet sees the way out of it. If this is often the normal state of human affairs, Trudeau's curious destiny is unlike that of any previous Canadian leader when, for the first time, the nation's existence is seriously threatened. Only a year ago, in his most astounding utterance, he said that separatism was dead and a few months later Quebec elected a separatist government. Of a sudden he saw that he had misjudged the whole situation and realized that the power which he did not desire or expect was no satisfaction but a daily torment hardly to be borne, impossible to escape.

He sought it, however, and must live with it until he finds a successor, not yet in sight, and we must live with him, willy-nilly, in a political marriage of convenience if not of love.

Our prime ministers were seldom loved. Macdonald, Laurier, St. Laurent and Pearson being the only memorable exceptions, while such able leaders as Borden and King were aloof, solitary and underestimated. Trudeau fits neatly that mould but he does not fit his original expectations, his forgotten Just Society and his wildly unreal economic assumptions.

In a final irony he is forced to oppose his own earlier opinions because, like those of his competitors, they were proved wrong. So, for that matter, were the opinions of leaders throughout the world. But besides the old Liberal luck of a Conservative party in its usual disorder, Trudeau has a notable advantage. As a pragmatist, not an ideologue, he is always ready to change his mind with changing events and to accept in his government men like Jack Horner whose opinions he flatly rejects. The battered Gladstone bag of Liberalism is infinitely expansible with space for anyone who votes the right way in the House of Commons.

As against the benefits of pragmatism Trudeau has two liabilities.

Little Talent

His temper is sharp these days and naturally so after the year of troubles, his manner sometimes unnecessarily abrasive when he responds to the pin pricks from Quebec and plays into the hands of Levesque, who uses him as a false proof of Canada's hostility.

Also, Trudeau is surrounded by a cabinet which, apart from Donald Macdonald and Jean Chretien, contains little talent, and by a group of experts who disagree about nearly every problem and generally offer conflicting advice to the laymen.

Still, what happens to Trudeau as a person is not very important and, by history's measurement, his tenure will be short anyhow. What alone matters is the nation and it, like him, must get used to living in crisis, living dangerously when it has no other option. Such is the nature of our generation, not what we wanted or expected but what our mistakes, achievements and mere chance have imposed on us.

Thus Trudeau has plenty to think about on his too brief holidays and he will need to refresh all his strength of body and mind for the days ahead. And since we have discovered no adequate substitute for the least typical of Canadians, our stake in his future is perhaps higher than we expect.

Dirty Work

I wonder if all the people who are making decisions about oil tankers have thought about the fish, crabs, plankton, etc., gradually disappearing, and the gulls no longer circling and wheeling overhead, their food having been destroyed by oil.

Are we going to see another Mediterranean here on this coast, and these inland waters?

"It is the oil that really creates feelings of violence" says Noel Mostert in his book about oil tankers, Supership. Mr. Mostert lives on the Mediterranean and has seen it gradually deteriorate through industrial development, sewage disposal and oil refineries. This serious pollution that has destroyed sea life and fisheries, and closed beaches to swimming, is the result of about 50 years of "progress," and we in B.C. will see it in much less time.

The Great Lakes are about the most contaminated area in Canada, the result of negligence on the part of private industry; and governments catering to industry rather than environment and the general welfare of people and all living things.

A typical example of private company lack of conscience is reported in the Vancouver Sun, Aug. 13, where Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd. refused the orders of the pollution control branch to clean up PCB's at Prince Rupert's harbor.

Mostert mentions estuaries as "most heavily affected by oil pollution." The plankton, phytoplankton and zooplankton, tiny organisms in the sea that provide us with oxygen, convert the nutrients into the food that sea life depends on, keep the cycle of life going, are destroyed by oil and cannot survive endless disruption of the cycle.

Leakages and seeping, in the day to day operation of tankers and refineries, cause more constant damage than large spectacular spills. Tankers and oil transportation will do their dirty work even if there are no spills. Let us conserve all energy. — Eve Smith, RR1, Port Washington, South Pender Island.

Corporate UVic

I have been waiting almost two weeks for the great sound of applause I fully expected to follow your August 6 article, UVic a Going Growing Major Industry; well, as everyone remains silent, I cheer alone.

Isn't it something truly marvellous that we have finally outgrown that ridiculous, old fashioned notion that a university should be a seat of learning and a bastion of higher culture? Now at last UVic has attained a corporate image, which is so much in keeping with the world of the late twentieth century and the Social Credit regime; now it is an efficient manufacturing centre of salaried citizens with a rate of production doubling every six years; and not just any old sort of salaried citizen — we have specialty items.

Public administrators, we are proud to learn, is one of UVic's most important line of goods. Well, we all know how much Canada in general and B.C. in particular are in need of more and more and mightier mandarins, and it is to be hoped that our university spares no expense to secure the very best in the way of professors to teach such esoteric subjects as Proliferation 400, Procrastination 425 and Evasiveness 302.

More goodies are in store of the future, a faculty for speech and hearing, and one for the science of body motions, and there is to be recreation and leisure and a school of optometery — Can we look forward to a school of manicuring — or housepainting? No doubt about it UVic is in competition with Camosun, which is all to the good in a free enterprise world. Perhaps in desperation or a fit of nostalgia Camosun will go in heavily for academics.

It is heartening to read that UVic's vice-president K. G. Pedersen seems to be so enthusiastic about our government's plans and efforts to tailor our universities more than ever before toward commercial ends. Many in his position fail to be so advanced in their ideas. Yet oddly enough he yearns for the good old days of Victoria College when its ex-students "received awards for in excess of their share in terms of numbers." I and my family attended Victoria College, a very small institution (there is no high school now that small). There were no entrance qualifications other than grade twelve, and as far as my memory serves, not one member of the faculty with a PhD. Professors quaintly enough were expected to teach, not publish or perish; in fact they had no young assistants on whom to foist their lecture duties. Those were the big had days of basics; courses such as non-verbal communication, and program analysis had not yet been invented. — Monica Oldham, 511 Victoria Avenue.

Tourists Beware

As a visitor to Victoria, I would like through the medium of your paper to express my thoughts on the problems of the dwindling tourist dollars. First, the increased ferry costs; secondly, the lack of trailer spaces, and last but by no means least, the police force.

Have the Victoria citizens got such a low crime rate, no murders, drugs or related crimes, that the taxpayers can afford to hire a policeman to go around town with a tape measure to ensure that its visitors are not parked more than 12 inches from the curb! This happened to me, I was fined $10. So beware all tourists to this beautiful "I wear a smile city." — M. E. Rempel, Royal Oak Motel.

Bus Pass Thanks

As many of your readers are probably aware, B.C. Hydro has approved the conversion of the bus pass at the University of Victoria.

Through your pages I would like to inform the public that we received help from a number of people. The following people should be thanked for pressing the case for students at UVic: MLA Dr. Scott Wallace; MLA Lyle Kahl; Walter Donald, executive assistant to Sam Bawlf, Minister of Recreation and Conservation; MLA Charles Barber; Hugh Curtis, minister of housing and municipal affairs; Jim Bennett, the executive assistant to the Minister of Education; and Mike Fleming, the president of Local 109 of the Amalgamated Transit Union.

Thanks are also due to three members of the UVic administration: Trevor Matthews, dean of administration; Peter Darling, management consultant; and Ted Sawchuck, director, student and ancillary services.

I would also like to thank the many people who assisted us and wrote letters in our support.

And, of course, bouquets are in order to B.C. Hydro for approving the pass. Students feel quite strongly that the UVic pass is a step in the right direction for providing a total public transit policy in British Columbia.

Thank you very much. — Brian Gardiner, President, Alma Mater Society, University of Victoria.

Vitamin Treatment

In view of the attention currently being focussed on the human resources minister's refusal to include megavitamin treatment under the universal pharmacare program and certain statements of the minister, we as member of the B.C. Committee for Orthomolecular Medicine feel impelled to clarify the events surrounding this controversy for the benefit of your readers.

On June 1 the provincial government announced a program of universal pharmacare which at the same time actually removed vitamins from coverage under the plan. A group of concerned citizens realized that the responsbile minister, Bill Vander Zalm, had not done his homework. They therefore formed the B.C. Committee for Orthomolecular Medicine to fight for reinstatement of vitamins under Pharmacare. Coverage for vitamins is already provided under other provincial pharmacare plans, federal plans and private plans such as MSA, Blue Cross and Blue Shield.

From the start our major concern has been with sufferers from serious and chronic illnesses such as multiple sclerosis (MS) and myasthenia gravis who rapidly become incapacitated with consequent loss of livelihood if they do not receive megavitamin treatment. There are no "orthodox" treatments that will reverse these diseases. These sufferers then become welfare recipients and if vitamin treatments are not available under pharmacare, many will be denied help altogether.

The committee has within the last few weeks presented Mr. Vander Zalm with briefs concerning the success of megavitamin therapies in treating MS victims in B.C. who are able to afford them (approx. $100 to $120 per month) and also the plight of welfare cases who are currently being denied the treatment: names and specifics were given to the minister, and he has personally met with patients, previous "hopeless cases," who have made a complete recovery, as well as with Dr. Abram Hoffer, a Victoria specialist in megavitamin therapy who is acknowledged by Dr. Scott Wallace to be an international authority in this field.

The end result, however, is that Mr. Vander Zalm still refuses to allow vitamins under pharmacare even when the patients' doctors are prepared to recommend in writing to the pharmacare director that their patients are benefitting from megavitamin treatment. The minister, under intense pressure, has now announced, in co-operation with the BCMA, a study into the value of certain megavitamin treatments. While this move is to be welcomed, it does nothing for the many sufferers who will deteriorate and become incapacitated before the report is available, and the minister gives this matter his further consideration.

It is surely significant that the BCMA, which only a few weeks ago informed the minister that there would be "no value" in a controlled study of megavitamin treatment has now reversed itself, and agreed to undertake the study. If the BCMA can reverse itself so dramatically, why cannot the minister retract his original decision to remove all vitamins from pharmacare and make them available now to sufferers from chronic diseases where the patient's doctor recognizes a need?

With the best will in the world, we cannot see any reason for the minister's continued attitude except pride and obstinacy. The minister made a foolish decision in the blanket removal of vitamins from pharmacare and rather than relent now in response to people's desperate need, he is waiting for the results of a medical study so that his response can be carefully tailored to its recommendations and hence immune from further criticism. In this way, Bill Vander Zalm is not showing himself to be tough and resolute in the face of criticism so much as lacking in the intelligent flexibility and essential humanity so vital to someone with his portfolio. — Dale Humphreys, Stewart Schoen, B.C. Committee for Orthomolecular Medicine, 5986 Oldfield Road.

Other Culprits

I read in the Times of Aug. 16 that Sidney has placed a total ban on sprinkling, etc. and imposed penalties of 30 days or $200 for violation. I recall reading previous reports of similar water shortages throughout the entire Saanich peninsula.

How about two years or $10,000 for those evil and greedy people who pushed urban development into these areas in the face of the known water shortage? — J. A. Miller, 2278 Allenby Street.

Parliamentary System 'Part of Our Problem'

Canada's Lawyers Press for Change

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — It is fashionable to ask if Canada is beginning to suffer from "the British disease." In other words, are our economic problems basically the same as those that have afflicted Britain and made it one of the poorest countries in Western Europe?

Britain is usually diagnosed as being too much of a welfare state. The critics argue that there are too many workers employed in public services and not enough in private enterprise and that the rate of tax is so high as to discourage private investment in industry.

Canada, it is said, is making the same mistake, because more than 40 per cent of the Gross National Product is now funnelled through government.

The difficulty with the argument is that such highly successful economies as West Germany spend a higher proportion of national production on public services than does Britain, or for that matter Canada.

Eroded by Time

We have to look for some other explanation for the dismal similarity between the British and Canadian economies. And it may lie in our system of government.

When the fathers of confederation drafted the Canadian constitution, Britain was at the height of its Victorian glory and the United States was just emerging from a devastating civil war. There was no hesitation in writing into the British North America Act the principle that Canada would have a system of government similar to that of Britain.

But the monarchy and the parliamentary form of government are rather less persuasive models today.

The United States has developed a vigorous and relatively open system of democracy that seems to be well fitted to a country spread across a continent and embracing many regional cultures and economics. The president is elected by a national vote but can legislate only with the consent of the Senate representing the states of the union, and the representatives, elected according to population.

National Consensus

The two major political parties represent all regions and classes, and when the system works well, one can observe the national consensus being worked out in debates in the Congress and between the Congress and the president.

In the parliamentary system, the prime minister controls not only his cabinet executive but also a majority of supporters in the House of Commons. He does not have to negotiate with a legislature — at least not in public.

If representatives from the regions want to have an influence on national policy, they must make their views known in the cabinet or in the caucus of the governing party, both of which met in private.

By the time the government presents its legislation to Parliament, the issue is more or less settled and nothing the opposition parties can say will have much influence.

Parliamentary debate is mostly a charade and the parties come to represent, not broad national coalitions, but regions or classes.

Britain is bedevilled by class warfare. The Labor party, by and large, represents the interests of workers against capital. The Conservative party, by and large, represents capital against labor.

So unsuccessful has been this system that we now see the growth of Scottish, Welsh and Irish nationalist parties which hold the balance of power and prevent either class group keeping the upper hand. All is chaos.

In Canada, the major parties have sought to represent a cross-section of all classes and regions, but they have not been successful in recent years in this uniting approach to politics.

To some extent this is the result of the rise of the New Democratic Party, which is of course based on the model of the British Labor party. It is a class party, depending very largely on the support of the trade union movement.

But the Liberals and Tories also divide the regions. The Liberals are powerful in Quebec and Ontario, the Tories in the west. The Atlantic region spreads its support.

The result is that the national government can only rarely depend upon national support for its policies. It is torn by class and regional differences, and when there is a conciliation — a trade-off between competing groups — it occurs in private rather than on the floor of Parliament.

In the United States, the president, the Congress, the business community, organized labor and spokesmen for most of the regions of the country may agree after much debate on the appropriate economic policy for the country. In Canada — or in Britain — that can't happen.

The party system, reflecting differences in class and regional interests, ensures there will always be a powerful opposition to the policies of the national government. Whatever the government proposes will be hotly attacked in the Commons and in the national political debate.

This may be good for democracy — as long as it does not cripple the country. There is some evidence that it is in fact crippling Britain because no government can mobilize a national effort — and it may now be happening in Canada.

The Canadian government faces not only party and class criticism in Parliament, but also powerful provincial governments speaking for regional aspirations.

Ten years ago, it was an article of faith among Canadian politicians that the parliamentary system was the best form of government and certainly superior to that of the United States. Today there are a surprising number who will agree in private that the wildly unrepresentative form of elections, the partisan style of debate, the adversary system of voting, and the secretive nature of decision-making lie at the root of our problems with the economy and with national unity.

Little Notice

The Canadian Bar Association, speaking for the country's lawyers, has now lent its powerful support to those who wish to convert the Canadian parliamentary system into something more like the U.S. congressional form of government.

This is a development of great importance in the constitutional development of Canada, but it seems to have passed with little public attention. Indeed, one wonders whether many of the lawyers in whose name the action has been taken understand what is being said by their leaders.

In publishing and endorsing a research study entitled Freedom of Information in Canada—Will the Doors Stay Shut?, the association accepts the view that ministers are no longer effectively accountable to Parliament.

The study asserts also that civil servants are no longer effectively responsible to ministers who cannot, therefore, be held responsible to Parliament.

Accordingly, says the association, ministers must be made subject, in questions of access to government information, to impartial judges who can decide whether or not a particular government document can safely be made public.

One can accept much of the criticism of the working of the parliamentary system without agreeing that the best solution is quietly to transfer power to the courts. The alternative is to make the political system work better, or if we can't do that, to devise a new system of government through full and public debate.

The bar association's research study was written by T. Murray Rankin as a thesis at Harvard University in the United States.

Rankin and the association argue in effect that Canada should adopt a freedom of information law similar in principle to that of the U.S. But they have to face the fact that the U.S. system of government, based on division of powers between the co-equal executive, legislature and judiciary, is quite different from the system in Canada where the executive is directly responsible to Parliament — the highest court in the land. That is, not subject to the rule of the courts of law.

In the U.S., when the government refuses to produce a document, a citizen may go to court and appeal. The court can examine the document and order that it be published, overruling the executive branch.

The Canadian government has resisted any such system, arguing that ministers — unlike their counterparts in the U.S., are responsible to Parliament. If they refuse to produce a document, they can be questioned in Parliament and, in theory, overruled, and perhaps even dismissed from office.

'It's a Myth'

To transfer judgment to the courts, says the Canadian government, would be to undermine the principle that ministers are responsible to Parliament — that in the end, Parliament makes the decisions.

Rankin and the bar association meet this argument head on by saying that ministerial responsibility and the rule of Parliament are myths. The research study says:

"In practice, except in the last report, parliamentary history has completely nullified the theoretical underpinnings of ministerial responsibility. Since the cabinet is chosen from the ranks of the political party electing the greatest number of MPs, if the government commands a majority of seats, it can force bills through the legislature as it likes — much more easily than the president can do so in the U.S.

"Moreover, since the membership of parliamentary committees reflects the political composition of the House, the government of the day can largely thwart any meaningful supervisory role Parliament might have had."

Party Discipline

There is a great deal of truth in this criticism, but it has much wider application than in the area of access to information. If Parliament can't hold ministers, and through them, the civil servants responsible for the way in which they handle information, how can it hold them accountable for other even more important matters of administration?

The truth, as some of us have been saying for years, is that the rise of the party system over the past century giving the prime minister and his colleagues control of a disciplined majority in the Commons, has gravely weakened parliamentary democracy.

But we can't cure this by transferring jurisdiction over information to the courts. The question of whether or not it is in the public interest to make public a particular document is a matter of political judgment, and not of law.

The problem is to make sure that they are accountable to Parliament for those decisions.

It is questionable also whether it would be wise to require judges to make essentially political judgments, and doubtful if they are qualified to do the job — although it is easy to understand why the Canadian Bar Association should think they are the wisest and the best in the land.

STOP HUSTLING THE LOTTERIES

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

Lotteries are popular, and perhaps governments have no real choice but to accommodate the public's desire to take part in them.

Furthermore, government-run lotteries offer superior assurances of honest dealing and desirable use of the proceeds — to promote sports, the arts, recreation, medical research and the like.

Under state auspices, they are a form of voluntary taxation, and of income redistribution in favor of the prize winners.

Viewed as taxation and income redistribution, however, their voluntary nature is the only thing in their favor. For this "tax" is not related to ability to pay, nor is the redistribution based on need or merit, but on pure chance.

Even when viewed simply as gambling, which is primarily how the ticket-buying public regards them, lotteries are a poorer bet than that other form of state-sanctioned gambling, wagering at the racetrack. The odds against winning a major prize are extremely high.

The chance of cashing a $1 million ticket in Loto Canada or $100,000 in Wintario is usually not much better than one in a million.

All these considerations ought to restrain governments in their promotion of lotteries. Instead, we see both the federal and provincial lotteries peddling dreams of easy riches as if the well-being of society depended on everyone buying a ticket.

It's the hard sell all the way in their television advertising: Don't miss this big chance . . . think of the luxurious life that may be yours . . . see these exultant winners of previous draws.

As noted, there's a good case for government operation of lotteries. But it doesn't follow that governments should hustle the public to get into them like a shill for a crap game.

Lottery advertising should be straightforwardly factual, stating dates of draws, amounts and numbers of prizes, and places where tickets may be bought. To keep to the truth-in-advertising principles espoused by their consumer affairs departments, governments should also state the approximate odds against winning any particular prize.

The End of a Bad Trip

By JOHN LEONARD
New York Times

He is big. He always has been, over six feet, with that slump of the shoulders and tuck in the neck big men in the United States often affect, as if to apologize for being above the democratic norm in size. (In high school and at college he played varsity basketball. In high school he was senior class president.) And he looks healthy enough, blue-eyed behind his beard, like a trapper or a mountain man, acquainted with silences. He also grins a lot.

Odd, then, to have noticed earlier — at the house, when he took off his shabby coat to play ping-pong — that the white arms were unmuscled. The coat may have been a comment. This, after all, is Southern California, where every man is an artist, an advertiser of himself; where every surface is painted and every object potted; where even the statues seem to wear socks. The entire population ambles, in polyesters, toward a Taco Bell. To wear a brown, shabby cloth coat in Southern California is to admit something.

So he hasn't been getting much exercise. Nor would the children have elected him president of any class. At the house they avoided him. Or, since he was too big to be avoided entirely, they treated his presence as a kind of door to pass through hurriedly, to be safe on the other side. They behaved like cats. Of course, he ignored them. But I think they were up to more than just protecting themselves from his lack of curiosity. Children are expert readers of grins.

His grin is intermittent. The dimples twitch on and off; between them, teeth are bared; above them, the blue eyes disappear in a wince. This grin isn't connected to any humor the children know about. It may be a tic. It could also be a function of some metronome made on Mars: It registers inappropriate intervals. We aren't listening to the same music.

This is the man who introduced me to the mysteries of mathematical science, the man I could never beat at chess, the man who wrote haiku and played with computers. Now there is static in his head, as though the mind had drifted off its signal during sleep. He has an attention span of about 30 seconds.

I am to take him back to where he lives, in the car I have rented in order to pretend to be a Californian. We are headed for a rooming house in one of the beach cities along a coast of off-ramps and oil wells. It is a rooming house that thinks of itself as Spanish. The ruined-hacienda look requires a patio, a palm tree and several miles of corrugated tile. He does not expect me to come up to his room, but I insist. I have brought along a six-pack of beer.

The room is a slum, and it stinks. It is wall-to-wall beer cans, hundreds of them, under a film of ash. He lights cigarets and leaves them burning on the windowsill or the edge of the dresser or the lip of the sink, while he thinks of something else — Gupta sculpture, maybe, or the Sephiroth Tree of the Kabbalah. The sink is filthy, and so is the toilet. Holes have been burnt in the sheet on the bed, where he sits. He likes to crush the beer cans after he has emptied them, then toss them aside.

He tells me that he is making a statement, that this room is a statement, that the landlord will understand the meaning of his statement. In a week or so, according to the pattern, they will evict him, and someone will find him another room, which he will turn into another statement, with the help of the welfare cheques he receives on account of his disability, which is the static in his head.

There are no books, no newspapers or magazines, no pictures on the wall. There is a television set, which he watches all day long while drinking beer and smoking cigarets. I am sufficiently familiar with the literature on schizophrenia to realize that this room is a statement he is making about himself. I am also sufficiently familiar with his history to understand that, along with his contempt for himself, there is an abiding arrogance. He refuses medication. They can't make him take it, any more than they can keep him in a hospital. He has harmed no one. One night, in one of these rooms, he will set himself on fire.

He talks. Or blurts: scraps from Oriental philosophers, Lao-tzu I think, puns, incantations, obscenities, names from the past. There are conspiracies; I am part of one of them. He grins, winces, slumps, is suddenly tired, wants me to get out almost as much as I want to get out, seems to have lapsed into a permanent parenthesis. Anyway, I have a busy schedule.

Well, speed kills slowly, and he fiddled too much with the oxygen flow to his brain. He wanted ecstasy and revelation, the way we grew up wanting a bicycle, a car, a girlfriend: These belonged to us by right, as middle-class Americans. So, then, did salvation belong to us by right.

I would like to thank Timothy Leary and all the other sports of the 1960s who helped make this bad trip possible. I wish R.D. Laing would explain to me, once again and slowly, how madness is a proof of grace. "The greatest magician," said Novalis, "would be the one who would cast over himself a spell so complete that he would take his own phantasmagorias as autonomous appearances."

One goes back to the rented car and pretending to be a Californian as, perhaps, one had been pretending to be a brother. It is odd, at my age, suddenly to have become an only child.

Nobody Wants Bormann's Bones

FRANKFURT — The bones of Martin Bormann — for nearly three decades the most "wanted" Nazi war criminal thought to be hiding — probably will wind up in a police museum. No one else wants them.

This will be a better end, perhaps, than air force commander Hermann Goering, Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and nine other top Nazis sentenced to death by the International Military Tribunal at Nuremberg had.

Their ashes were thrown in a river.

The ashes of Bormann, Adolf Hitler's ruthless deputy, should have been with them. He, too, was sentenced to death for war crimes, but he had been tried in absentia. He was believed to be hiding out as were Adolf Eichmann and others who escaped the Allied dragnet.

He was not hiding out and 32 years after he bit a cyanide pellet to escape capture by the Russians in conquered Berlin his skeletal remains still are unburied.

Horst Gauf, the public prosecutor for the state of Hesse, said Monday he is considering moving Bormann's remains to one of the West German crime museums maintained by big city police departments for their internal use.

"It would be a police museum where mementos of various criminal cases are displayed," he said. "Such a great deal of scientific work was involved in identifying the remains that they would be of great interest and could be used as material in police training.

"The Bormann family does not want the remains," he said. "The family has renounced its claim to them."

He said the museum will not be open for the public.

Bormann, according to evidence gathered by Gauf's staff, killed himself on May 2, 1945, shortly after Hitler took his own life in his chancellery bunker.

But for 28 years, until April 11, 1973, Bormann was the most "wanted" man in the world. There was no conclusive evidence that he was dead. He was reported seen in various disguises in such far-flung places as Egypt, Spain, Portugal and Latin America. He even was "seen" in Moscow — at a football game.

The Bormann reports probably still would be coming into Gauf's office, who had the task of tracking him down, if two workers laying cables in a West Berlin freight railway yard had not turned up the remains.

DYING MAN'S LAETRILE PLEA DENIED

RIVERHEAD, N.Y. (AP) — A dying man's plea that his doctor be allowed to give him the alleged cancer treatment laetrile, which is banned in New York, was turned down Monday by a Long Island judge.

The lawyer for cancer patient Karl Koch, 67, said he would appeal the decision to higher courts even though Koch may have only days or months to live.

Koch, a pharmacist who lives in Huntington Station, had asked the court to grant immunity from prosecution to his doctor, cancer specialist Donald Cole, if Cole administered the controversial substance to Koch.

The doctor told Justice Lawrence Bracken in Supreme Court here that he had not prescribed laetrile for Koch, and believed it to be of dubious merit, but that Koch still wanted it.

Koch had left Whitestone General Hospital in Queens and returned home in expectation that Cole would be permitted to give him the substance.

However, the judge rejected his plea, noting that state laws prohibit use of unapproved drugs and place restrictions on experimental use of drugs.

Presley Wife Cut from Will

The 13-page will, witnessed by Charles Hodge, Presley's guitarist; Ginger Alden, the singer's fiancee, and Ann Dewey Smith, was dated March 3, 1977.

Presley, 42, was found unconscious at his Graceland mansion last Tuesday and pronounced dead later at Baptist Hospital. An autopsy showed death was caused by a heart attack.

Although the extent of Presley's estate has not been disclosed, records in the Shelby County tax assessor's office show the singer owned four parcels of land in the county appraised at more than $500,000.

His Graceland residence, consisting of the 18-room mansion and 13.7 acres of land, is appraised at $240,300. A parcel of commercial property of about 11.2 acres across Elvis Presley Boulevard and north of the mansion is valued at almost $241,000.

All of the property is in the vicinity of Graceland, officials said.

The will directed that after costs of administering the estate are paid, the remaining assets be held in trust for Presley's nine-year-old daughter Lisa Marie; his grandmother Minnie Mae Presley; his father, and other relatives living at the time of his death.

A HOT TIME FOR LOSERS

PORT HARDY (CP) — It's not easy being a loser.

Especially not in the World Championship Crab Derby, which concluded Sunday at this northern Vancouver Island community.

The 32 losers were tossed into a pot of boiling water and eaten on the spot.

The derby was the first of what organizers hope will become an annual event on a par with Nanaimo's annual World Bathtub Championship race to Vancouver.

The crab derby was the finale to Port Hardy's Filomi Days a three-day celebration honoring the area's main industries — fishing, logging and mining.

Organizer Ross Mavis said the crab derby was a success although there were three nipped fingers and the occasional crustacean — perhaps sensing his fate — which refused to budge or headed back to the starting line partway through the race.

The event needed a specially-constructed, three-lane racetrack to accommodate the competitors in the only direction they can run — sideways.

The saltwater-filled track was 10 feet long and each lane was eight inches wide and six inches deep. The winner of each three-crab heat went into a special tank for further eliminations and the losers got the boiling water.

The owner of the winning crab was Dianne Bleaney of Port Hardy, who gave up the privilege of eating her entry in return for a $10 prize and a trophy.

Flooded Loo Spurred Dayan's Paris Visit

TEL AVIV — Israeli officials said today that Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan's surprise trip to Paris Monday was caused by a flooded aircraft toilet. Dayan was supposed to fly to London on a direct flight from Tel Aviv. His appearance in Paris led to suspicion that he had a secret appointment with some leading Middle East figure, perhaps King Hussein of Jordan.

A foreign ministry official, however, said: "Mr. Dayan caught the direct London flight but the plane was delayed on the runway two hours by a flooded toilet. After an hour Mr. Dayan got fed up and transferred to a Paris-bound plane, hoping to catch an onward London flight. At Paris he had to transfer to another terminal to fly to London. He did not leave the airport to meet anyone."

LUCKENBACH, Tex. — The three residents of Luckenbach, Tex., have extended an invitation to Prince Charles to visit when he comes to Texas in October. Jack Harmon, press secretary for the numerous beer parties celebrating the slightest event here, said Monday a formal invitation was being prepared for Charles, who is planning a 12-day tour of the United States in the fall. "We naturally assume he is planning to come to Luckenbach since the Alamo is on his itinerary, and it's in San Antonio, which is rapidly getting fame as the 'Gateway to Luckenbach,'" Harmon said.

PROVO, Utah — Actor Robert Redford has been sworn in as chairman of the Provo Canyon Sewer Service District. Redford, who lives at his Sundance Resort in the canyon's North Fork, chairs the group that is trying to get a sewer system built. The scenic canyon now relies on septic tanks. The sewer line would allow further development in the canyon, and Redford said he favors limited development of his resort without harming the environment. "I really do care about the environment," he said.

NEW YORK — Alice Crimmins, the former cocktail waitress convicted of manslaughter for strangling her daughter to death 12 years ago, has married a wealthy contractor who testified at her two trials that he was one of her lovers. A state prison spokesman said Monday Mrs. Crimmins, 37, married Anthony Grace July 15 at a New York lawyer's office. She is still serving a five to 20-year prison term for the conviction but is enrolled in a work-release program which gives her weekend furloughs and free time on weekdays to work as a secretary. She is also seeking release on parole.

CHIP BACK WITH WIFE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chip and Caron Carter were leaving today for Plains, Ga., where the U.S. president's son will help with the family peanut business.

The young couple, who had a week-long trial separation earlier this month, were driving to Plains with their six-month-old son James Earl Carter IV, spokeswoman Anne Anderson said Monday.

Mrs. Anderson said they will move into the president's now vacant home in Plains.

UGANDAN TRIAL

NAIROBI (UPI) — Sixteen prominent Ugandans went on trial today before a military tribunal on charges of plotting to overthrow President Idi Amin, Radio Uganda announced.

The Ugandans were arrested in February and included the former chairman of Uganda's public service commission, Abdullah Anyuru; the former chief inspector of schools, Y. Y. Opot; a former military intelligence officer, Lt. Ben Ogwant, and former assistant commissioner of police Daniel Musareko who was also undersecretary in the ministry of internal affairs.

JOBLESS IN U.K. AT NEW PLATEAU

LONDON (AP) — The British government announced today that the number of unemployed reached 1,635,950 in August, or 6.9 per cent of the labor force, the worst level since the Second World War. It was an increase of 13,500 from July and of 133,974 from August, 1976.

The increase marks the third straight month that the unemployment level worsened in Britain. It is expected to antagonize labor unions grumbling about the government's economic policies.

Meanwhile, in Brussels, the European Economic Community reported that 5,685,000 persons were without jobs at the end of July in the nine member countries, an increase of 12 per cent in a year and 6.7 per cent in one month.

At the end of June, the number of unemployed had stood at 5,324,000. In July, 1976, the number was 5,077,000.

The unemployment rate for the nine countries stood at 5.4 per cent of the work force at the end of July compared with 5.1 per cent at the end of June and 4.8 per cent in July, 1976.

Taxman Preparing a $300 Jolt For Thousands of Canadians

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says thousands of taxpayers will be surprised to find that they owe the federal government up to $300 in additional income tax when they file income tax returns in 1978.

Such a possibility results from new instructions issued to employers on the amount of income tax to deduct from pay cheques, the newspaper says.

It says the instructions, effective July 1, in many cases reduce the amount employers must withhold.

Officials of the department of national revenue said in a number of cases less money will be deducted than the employee is required to pay. The difference would have to be made up before the end of April, 1978.

The newspaper said the main impact will be on persons claiming substantial amounts of additional personal exemptions for reasons other than having wholly dependent children less than 18 years old.

Such persons might include those supporting other relatives or being able to claim the equivalent-to-married exemption, The Globe and Mail said.

It said the new instructions were designed to give effect to recent changes in federal and provincial tax rates.

Search Underway For Strait Plane

Divers began a search today for a Cessna 185 float plane believed to have gone down with four Americans aboard on a flight from Silva Bay, near Nanaimo, to Seattle on Sunday.

A U.S. coast guard spokesman said the plane is believed to be lying in water 500 yards from shore at Pilot Point near Seattle.

Listed as missing are Robert Coates and his wife Marjorie of Bellevue, Wash., and Rudy Schaverman and Eugene de Man of Seattle.

A search began Monday when two floats and a blue coat washed ashore near Point No Point on the Grand Peninsula across from Puget Sound. Gasoline was also reported on the surface.

Today's search will be carried out in the area where wreckage was thought to have been spotted on Sunday.

Some Jobs Still Open Despite Jobless Size

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite worsening unemployment between 1974 and 1976, employers were still having difficulty filling some jobs last year, says a survey published by the federal manpower department.

But the report, published in a quarterly review by the department, also says the number of occupations in which there were chronic shortages of workers declined to 17 last year from 30 in 1975 and 46 in 1974.

In 1974, there was an average monthly total of shortages for 24,400 jobs. This fell to 15,700 in 1975 and 10,000 last year.

Occupational shortages are defined in the survey as job openings which have remained unfilled for 30 days or more.

Most of the unfilled jobs either had low pay, required a fairly high level of training or were situated in remote parts of the country.

Among the occupations with chronic shortages were sewing machine operators, domestic maids, waiters and waitresses, motor vehicle mecranicn, hairdressers and insurance sales persons, the survey says.

"Two other occupations frequently in persistent shortage are miners and loggers, which are similar in that they involve strenuous physical work often carried out in remote areas of the country."

Skilled occupations in which there were chronic shortages in the period included auto body repairers, electricians, carpenters, cooks, diesel mechanics, hairdressers and inpairer.

Other occupations for which there were shortages of workers last year included secretary and babysitter.

A general shortage of graduate nurses, which was prevalent for many years, came to an end last year, the survey says, and in some parts of the country substantial surpluses developed.

"In Ontario, many of those in the 1976 graduating class were unable to find employment in the profession and some accepted positions in hospitals in the United States, whose representatives were actively recruiting in this country."

By the end of the year, shortages were a fraction of what they were in 1974 and there was also a sharp decline in the demand for nursing assistants.

In spite of relatively high unemployment in the Atlantic region, there were some extensive shortages for pipefitters and pipefitting welders and general duty nurses. No major shortages were reported from British Columbia.

Mandel Guilty In Fraud Case

BALTIMORE (AP) — Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel was convicted by a U.S. District Court jury today of 17 counts of mail fraud and one of racketeering, resulting from an influence-trading scheme involving horse racing.

Five co-defendants were also found guilty on the same 17 counts.

The seven-man, two-woman jury delivered the verdict after being deadlocked during 13 days of deliberations.

The trial was the second for the governor and his five co-defendants. The earlier trial was declared a mistrial after the jury found out about a jury-tampering effort. Mandel was never linked to the charge.

Under Maryland law, Mandel must give up his office.

On trial with the 57-year-old Mandel were Irvin Kovens; W. Dale Hess; Hess's business partners, brothers William and Harry Rodgers, and Ernest Cory.

Each man was accused of 20 mail-fraud counts. They were acquitted of three of those counts.

Each charge carries a top penalty of five years in jail and a $1,000 fine. Mandel, Cory and Kovens each were convicted of one racketeering count, the others two apiece. The maximum sentence for racketeering is 20 years and $25,000.

Mandel was charged with accepting between $300,000 and $400,000 in business interests, cash, bonds, Florida vacations, clothing and jewelry from the others.

Mandel

Prosecutors contend the items were in exchange for his efforts to get the 1972 state General Assembly to legislate benefits for Marlboro race track, then secretly owned by at least four of his co-defendants. Kovens disputes a claim he owned 60 per cent of Marlboro.

BCR Secretly Pays Dease Line Builder

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Railway has made a secret settlement with one of two contractors dismissed from working on the railway's Dease Lake extension when Premier Bennett halted work on the 420-mile line in northwestern B.C. last April.

Bill Owen, president of Chinook Construction and Engineering Ltd., of Vancouver, confirmed Monday that his company reached a settlement with the railway about three weeks ago.

"It is part of the deal that we keep the details confidential," Owen said.

Michael Miller, president of Miller Cartage and Contracting Ltd., of Richmond, said that his firm, which was forced off the job at the same time as Chinook, had still not settled with the railway.

"It seems we have another round to go with them. I don't know how it will end up, but we would like to avoid going the court route if we can."

Miller and Chinook were awarded contracts totalling $15.7 million for completing work on the final 49-mile stretch of the extension line to Dease Lake, following the withdrawal of contractor MEL Paving Ltd., of Red Deer, Alta., which subsequently won a $2.5 million out-of-court settlement of a civil fraud suit against the railway.

Miller has withdrawn completely from the work site, moving equipment estimated at about $4 million to Prince George and to Kitwanga, northeast of Terrace.

Chinook still has equipment valued at around $5 million in place on the railway extension.

"We have no other job to move it to," Owen said, "and we don't want to pull it out 'til we know where our next work lies. After all, we might be moving it in the wrong direction if it turns out there is work in the north."

B.C. Gov't Returns To Newspaper Game

The B.C. government got back into the newspaper business Monday printing 87,000 copies of a 20-page tabloid designed to spread the word about the Social Credit government.

The B.C. Government News was first printed by the Social Credit government of 22 years ago, despite cries from the then opposition that it was a waste of taxpayers' money.

And the former NDP government followed suit with its version of the news despite similar criticisms from Social Credit opposition.

The paper was last published two years ago.

Volume 22, issue No. 1, of the B.C. Government News explains in a column that the paper is to be "given a wide circulation in order to give all British Columbians to get on the mailing list."

The column says: "The paper will, as in the past, contain details of government announcements. In addition there will be public service announcements and feature articles.

Missing Mail Sidetracked

OTTAWA (CP) — Year-old editions of Western newspapers which began arriving here last week were part of a shipment of mail which sat unnoticed in a CN boxcar for nearly a year, a postal official said Monday.

The shipment of 340 bags of mail and 121 pakages was forgotten on a Toronto sidding after being sent to Montreal by mistake, a post office spokesman said.

The matter came to light when old newspapers began arriving at the Parliamentary Library and several Ottawa news bureaus.

"We don't know how it could have happened. We're very embarrassed," the spokesman said.

17 KILLED IN BUS CRASH

SAO PAULO (AP) — A passenger train crashed into a bus loaded with work-bound commuters near this industrial city this morning, killing 17 persons and injuring 14, police said.

The accident occurred at a grade crossing in the suburb of Arthur Alvin, 14 miles from Sao Paulo. Police said the bus driver apparently failed to stop at a flashing red signal at the crossing.

Chicken-Plucker Feathers Family Nest

VALOR, Sask. (CP) — Leonard Scheltgen and his family are making a name for themselves in manufacturing.

The family is selling some 400 patented chicken pluckers a year, retailing for $130 each complete, and has been maintaining that sales pace since the patent was recognized in 1972.

The family lives on 1,280 acres of farmland about 75 miles southwest of Regina where they keep a few pigs and, of course, a few chickens.

The machine consists of a plywood box with a steel drum, on which 28 rubber fingers are mounted. As the bird is held against the spinning fingers, the feathers fly off, even down to the pin feathers.

Different types of fingers are available for pheasants, partridge and chickens. The fingers used for chickens are also used for ducks and geese.

Scheltgen said he and his son, with the help of one hired worker, can cut out 100 boxes a day and put about 30 together in the same time period.

"Mother does the books and the correspondence and the two younger children that are still at home help in other ways," he said.

The bird is first scalded and then held by the feet and wings against the drum, which revolves with the help of an electric motor.

Most feathers are removed in 60 seconds.

"We find you must scald a bird that is still warm, and the best way is to scald 10 at a time. It takes a little practice to prepare the bird in just the right way, but it doesn't take very long to learn that. The machine will not tear the skin if the scalding process is carried out correctly."

The steel drums come from Saskatoon. The fingers are imported from the United States, the pulleys come from Winnipeg and the plywood is found locally. Each plucker is shipped in a custom-made cardboard box manufactured in Regina.

EGG BILK DENIED

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumers are obtaining the full effect of decreases in the cost of producing eggs and lower feed prices, Charles Munro, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, said Monday.

He was replying to charges by the Consumers' Association of Canada (CAC) that shoppers are being bilked on the price of eggs.

Munro said in a statement that "the CAC seemed determined to continue its long campaign against marketing boards such as the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) by misrepresenting the facts."

Created in 1972, CEMA controls the supply and farm price of eggs under a government-appointed body. The CAC argues that marketing boards such as CEMA result in higher prices to the consumer.

Munro said a four-cent reduction in egg prices this summer was a result of increased productivity and declining feed prices and not because of a change in the agency's pricing formula.

The CAC forced a hearing into CEMA's pricing practices in March, 1976, saying the complex cost production formula to determine the price paid to egg producers resulted in a price about 10 cents higher than justified by actual costs.

The National Farm Products Marketing Council said at the end of the hearings that the consumers' association had not proved its case, but it ordered a thorough review of the production cost formula.

PREMIERS' MEETING SATISFIES CLARK

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark said Monday that he was "generally very pleased" with the outcome of last weekend's provincial premiers meeting which rejected a Quebec proposal for reciprocal agreements on minority language education.

Aides said that Clark, who spent Monday in his Alberta riding of High River, also stressed the need for educational opportunities in both French and English but said he could not agree with Premier Rene Levesque's proposal for separate agreements with each of the other nine provinces.

Prime Minister Trudeau was not available for comment. Trudeau returned to the capital Monday but is still on vacation, his aides said.

However a government spokesman may hold a news conference later this week to comment, Trudeau's office said. There would certainly be some government reaction by next week.

More than a month ago Trudeau condemned the Quebec plan and urged premiers to resist it. He said minority school rights should be enshrined in the Canadian constitution.

Ed Broadbent, the New Democratic Party leader, was not immediately available for comment. He is on a French language immersion course.

Clark's aides said that he was pleased with calls by some of the premiers for a new federal budget to combat unemployment and inflation. The Conservatives also have been seeking a new budget.

NABET Raps Camu Choice

MONTREAL (CP)—The National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians has denounced Prime Minister Trudeau's choice of Pierre Camu as chairman of the Canadian Radio-televison and Telecommunications Commission.

In a telegram sent to the Prime Minister Monday, NABET international president Jean Benoit called upon the prime mnister to reconsider the appointment of the 54-year-old Camu, former head of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters.

Benoit said the association, which represents private broadcasters, "has a policy of contesting by all possible means unionization of radio and television stations; and has collaborated with member stations to discuss "methods of defeating unions and especially NABET."

He cited recent struggles to unionize stations in Winnipeg, Lethbridge, Windsor, Quebec City and Sherbrooke.

"We are certain that any decision taken by the CRTC, now under the direction of Mr. Camu, will be prejudicial to NABET and to any citizens' group during the presentation of briefs at CRTC hearings," Benoit said in the telegram.

Copies of the telegram were sent to Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve and Labor Minister John Munro.

Camu, meanwhile, says he accepted the government's offer to become the next chairman of the CRTC because it provides him with the means, albeit indirect means, to respond to the Quebec threat to national unity.

"I think there are indirect means of contributing to the debate, the big debate as we call it . . . and I would like to help the cause of the country," Camu, a 54-year-old native of Montreal, said in an interview Monday. Camu also said there is no apparent conflict of interest between his job at the CAB and the one he will take up Oct. 1

Beluga Named Tuaq

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Eskimo word Tuaq was chosen Monday as the name of the Vancouver Public Aquarium's five-week-old baby beluga whale.

Tuaq — pronounced too-ak — was chosen from a list of 18 names selected from the 10,000 suggestions submitted to the aquarium since the name-the-baby contest began Aug. 2.

Tuaq, which means "the only one," was submitted by Denis Foster who wins a trip for two down the United States west coast to visit major aquariums from Seattle, Wash., to San Diego, Calif.

Larry Dampier, president of the aquarium's board of governors, said the name is significant because Tuaq is the first beluga whale in North America to survive birth in captivity for more than a few hours.

He said contest judges also felt the name is appropriate because it is easy for children to pronounce and because the aquarium's other two belugas, Kavna and Sanaq, have Eskimo names.

Tuaq was born July 13 to Kavna who was pregnant when she was caught last year in Hudson Bay.

Foster, a 34-year-old graduate student in linguistics at the University of B.C., said he has been too busy this summer to visit the aquarium to see the baby beluga.

"I picked the name out of a standard reference book on North American native languages," he said.

40 WORKERS FIND JOBS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jobs have been found for 40 of the 170 Railwest employees who will lose their jobs when the company closes its Squamish boxcar manufacturing plant in two weeks, Ralph Sheffield, one of two union representatives on a job-finding committee, said during the weekend.

He said most of the jobs are in the steel industry in the Vancouver area.

Sheffield said he did not know when the committee will be able to find jobs for other Railwest workers.

Court Gives Rapist Bail

VANCOUVER (CP) — Businessman George Pappajohn was freed Monday on $15,000 bail while his lawyers appeal the rape conviction brought down against him Saturday.

Lawyer Jay Clarke also filed notices of appeal against conviction and sentence in the B.C. Court of Appeal. The appeal against conviction cited 37 grounds.

Bail was granted by B.C. Chief Justice John Farris, who said he was influenced by statements made by the trial judge, Justice Samuel Toy, of the B.C. Supreme Court.

Justice Toy, in sentencing Pappajohn, 38, to three years imprisonment, said it was doubtful if Pappajohn would be before the courts again.

Justice Farris, however, denied defence lawyer Clarke's application for permission for Pappajohn to travel to California, where he has extensive business interests, during the appeal.

Prior to and during his trial, Pappajohn — who also has real estate holdings in Vancouver — remained free on $15,000 bail and was allowed to visit California.

Appearing for the Crown, D. L. Winkler told Farris the appeal application was likely to take considerable time.

Pappajohn maintained he was innocent after he was convicted and sentenced for the 1976 rape of a 37-year-old real estate saleswoman. He appeared near collapse after sentence was passed.

The woman testified that Pappajohn threatened her first, then stripped and raped her before binding her arms and gagging her.

The notice of appeal against conviction argues that the conviction was against the weight of the evidence, adding: "the verdict of the jury was perverse in that no properly-instructed jury acting reasonably could have convicted the appellant on the evidence before the court.

The notice of application for leave to appeal against sentence argues that the sentence was excessive under all the circumstances. It adds that the trial judge erred in giving insufficient weight to the good character of the accused and erred in failing to take into account sufficiently the lack of violence.

'MEANINGFUL WORK'

Prisoners Help Boost Salmon

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Provincial prisoners are playing a major role in a successful salmon enhancement program on Vancouver Island.

This is the third year the enhancement program has been in operation.

It began when fisheries patroiman Fred Reder enlisted the help of the camp's principle officer, Bill (Scotty) McLeod. Reder, who's known as Radar by the townsfolk of Port Renfrew, says logger Maurice Tremblay reports that 35 miles of streams feeding the San Juan River have been cleared of huge log jams and other debris in the past three years, representing $200,000 worth of labor.

McLeod is enthusiastic about the co-operative program.

"From our point of view it's a meaningful work program. They're definitely helping the environment," he explained when the Times visited one of the work sites on Four Mile Creek.

★

In the shadow of a huge waterfall, the prisoners were clearing a path to the area in which an incubation box will be installed and operating by this fall.

The box was made by Tremblay, one of the many volunteers Reder has enlisted.

The prisoners who work on the salmon program are volunteers and some of them took time out from clearing the stream of large boulders and debris to explain why they opt for this job.

One of them, Rick, gave up the chance of doing kitchen chores to work on the project. Kitchen duty is usually top on the priority list of camp chores because "you get all you can eat and get paid seven days a week" he said.

He described the project as helping to make the area "ecologically beautiful."

Strapped for funds, Reder describes himself as a "diplomat who carries a fish in his briefcase," using salmon given him to say thanks to those who help. Among them is the town's doctor, Ken Harris, who dropped by to lend a hand.

Reder's enthusiasm is contagious. The prisoners, for example, added an extra set of steps to the approaches of the incubation box site so that people can visit it easily.

Reder lives in a small spartan cabin from mid-May to mid-October when he's on the job, commuting to his home at 1562 Rowan on the weekends.

Volunteer loggers have agreed to check on the incubation box, which will be fed from the waterfall, once Reder's duties for the year are ended.

Volunteers will also help Reder take the 80,000 eggs he expects to get from the spawning coho this fall.

Eating on the run — a cookie, slice of sausage and can of juice — Reder explained he often enlists the help of others to go on "drifts," travelling the 75 miles of waterways in an inflatable raft, checking the number of fish and chopping up logs so they can easily float away when the floods come.

Now the creek beds are drying and Reder spends hours rescuing fry and taking them to better areas. But Reder said the "drifts" are arduous, often encountering 10-foot waves along some of the reaches.

Because it takes longer than eight hours, the camp allows Reder to take prisoners on "drifts," camping overnight in the wilderness.

Reder's duties forbid clock-watching and sleep must often be savored in small stretches. In his drive to bring back the coho in large numbers, he has had to rationalize the priorities of his job.

"It's better to save thousands of fry than catch one sports fisherman who has gone over his limit," he says.

★

In the first year of operation, Reder said 100,000 fry were rescued. He hopes to install more incubation boxes next year.

The prisoners and people of Port Renfrew will be there to help.

As Tremblay explained: "We have the biggest coho in B.C. Where the average is 10 pounds anywhere else, ours are 15 pounds. We all want to see this thing work."

Tighter Road Rules For Horse Riders?

Horseback riders who travel Saanich roads could soon be facing tighter regulations.

The new regulations would be enforced through amendments to the municipality's streets and traffic bylaw.

The administrative traffic safety committee, headed by municipal engineer Cliff Warren, has contacted riding clubs asking for recommendations.

Barbara den Boer, secretary of the Vancouver Island Appaloosa Horse Club, reports her club is recommending all riders wear hard hats, that horses only be allowed to walk while ridden on a road, and that horses travel with the traffic flow, not against it.

The club also advocates that council establish a policy linking parks with trails to eliminate road travel, that signs be posted on roads used by riders as a warning to motorists. It also wants motorists restricted to 15 miles per hour while overtaking a horse and rider.

Warren said today he has yet to see the club's proposals but would be in favor of the mandatory wearing of hard hats, of travelling with the vehicular flow and of making riders travel in single file while on a roadway.

He was not in favor of the 15-mile-per-hour restriction because the roads are "for the use of traffic, not horses."

Warren said the bylaw is currently too loose, requiring only that a horse be properly saddled and bridled and under the control of its rider while travelling on roads.

"If two or three (riders) are abreast on the shoulder of a road there is nothing we can do about it," he said.

Warren said the need for tighter regulations became evident after a rider, travelling with companions, was thrown from a horse, sustaining several injuries. The rider was not wearing head protection.

Committee member Ald. Sandy Noel said today he is willing to sit down with club representatives to discuss the issue.

He pointed out that motorcyclists are required to wear hard hats as a safety precaution.

Details, he added, will be determined when the plan reaches the stage of local area consideration.

"We have an ongoing program but it won't be defined until we get into the local area planning," he said.

As an example, Laurenson said the municipality has bought property off West Saanich Road with a horse trail in mind.

MARILYN
. . . 21 years ago

Twenty-one years ago this evening 30,000 lined every Dallas Road vantage point to cheer 19-year-old Marilyn Bell as she completed her 17-mile swim across the Strait of Juan de Fuca in 10 hours and 38 minutes.

Waves of spectators — some waist-deep in the sea — surged along the shoreline as the Toronto swimmer touched land about 100 yards east of Finlayson Point. Before conquering the Strait, she was already an established swimmer. In 1954 she swam Lake Ontario and in 1955 became the youngest to swim the English Channel.

A cairn marks the spot on the pathway above the beach where Marilyn landed.

★ ★ ★

It was a week ago today that Elvis Presley died and record store manager Bill Neilsen is still trying to solve the mystery of the Calgary fan.

The man, in his early 30s, came into Treacher's Records one day before Elvis died — and bought Presley records by the armloads.

"It was an incredible sight," Nielsen said. "He had two copies and sometimes three copies of each album. It came to well over $200.

"At the time I assumed he was just a collector but then when Presley died the next day and records became scarce, I started thinking about it. The timing was rather strange."

If the Calgary man is still in town it would be interesting to hear if he has ESP or something.

Senior citizens in Greater Victoria are starting to organize. Thirty-seven charter members got together on the weekend to form the Kiwanis Club for senior citizens.

Sponsored by the Oak Bay Kiwanis Club, the seniors have undertaken a project to assist the meals-on-wheels program which provides hot meals to shut-ins at a nominal cost.

President of the latest Kiwanis edition is Jack Irving and the secretary is Mel Zirul.

RADIUM LIKELY BURIED

A tiny tube of radium which disappeared from Royal Jubilee Hospital a month ago is probably deep in the Hartland Road garbage dump or deep in Juan de Fuca Strait.

Dr. A. C. Pickles, the hospital's executive director, said today that the Atomic Energy Commission and the radiation protection division of the provincial health department are convinced everything possible was done to find it.

The tube, about half the size of a wood match, vanished July 26 when a freak defect allowed it to drop from its container after being used in cancer treatment.

Pickles said he thinks it was likely swept up in the cleaning process or carried into the sewer system which dumps at sea.

The tube would only have been hazardous if it had come in direct contact with someone for a prolongued period, he added.

Inquest Set In Saanich Car Death

An inquest will open Wednesday night into the death of a 22-year-old Saanich man in a two-car collision at Scott and Ryan.

Steven Quan of 4927 Lemaire Place was pronounced dead less than a half-hour after the collision Sunday afternoon.

A passenger in his car, Donald Larson of 5156 Santa Clara, received only minor injuries while the driver of the other car, Barry Smith, 20, of 941 Kings was unhurt.

Police said Quan was driving south on Scott and Smith west on Ryan.

The inquest will be held at McCall's funeral chapel at 7:30 p.m.

Meanwhile, an 18-year-old Esquimalt youth who was critically injured in a motorcycle-car mishap last Tuesday, has died.

Lloyd Robert Moss of 1024 Bay died at 7:30 p.m. Monday in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Moss had just bought a new motorcycle and was giving his cousin a ride when he collided with a car driven by Jack White of 901 Garthland.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. I would like to know how the Foul Bay Road got its name?—W.J.S.

A. It's an historic name associated with the early maritime history of Victoria. Foul Bay, the other name for Gonzales Bay, signifies poor anchorage — a warning to mariners. The road connects up with the bay.

Q. How big is the Capital Regional District? P.S.D.

A. It has a total area of 934 square miles with a population of 224,600.

Even Gov't Taxed

The provincial government is not exempt from its own sales tax — a situation that has puzzled Saanich school trustees and inflated supply bids.

Monday the board opened tenders for kitchen equipment for a new school and found that the low bid was about $7,000 over the budgeted amount of $90,000.

The bid, however, included almost $6,000 for provincial sales tax.

The government pays about 60 per cent of the cost of the equipment under the capital financing formula, prompting board chairman Gerry Kristianson to comment it is "iniquitous" that the government shares the funding and then takes $6,000 back in the form of social service tax..

Because the low bid is higher than the budget, provincial government approval is necessary before the tender can be awarded.

In other board business, trustee Norma Sealey is considering resigning her seat in mid-term in an effort to get school board elections to coincide with the biennial Sidney municipal elections.

But before she makes the move, she wants the minister of education to ensure the winner of the by-election will be able to sit for two years to dovetail with the Sidney elections.

PLANNERS EYE $6M HOTEL

A proposal for a major hotel costing about $6 million, to be built on property overlooking the Inner Harbor one block west of the legislative buildings, has been submitted to city planners and advisory committees for discussion.

The hotel of about 150 rooms would be built on the Belleville-Oswego-Quebec-Pendray block by a Victoria-based group associated with Flag Inns, a chain of independently operated hotels in Australia and New Zealand.

Don Ray, managing director of two Gorge Road motels, the Coachman Inn and Canterbury Inn, and president of Flag Inns of North America, said today the principals in the proposed development are himself "and a group of Australians."

Technically, there is no obstruction in the path of the project because the property is already zoned for hotel-motel use.

But Ray and his architect, Ben Levinson of the Victoria firm Orme and Levinson, both said it will require "sensitive" treatment because located on the site are two former mansions which have been recommended for heritage designation.

The buildings are the tourist attraction known as Judge Hunter's Haunted House, 327 Belleville, and the Captain's Palace restaurant, 309 Belleville.

Preliminary plans call for the retention of the latter on its present site, but the relocation of the Hunter building to the western (Pendray) side of the block, where it would form part of a so-called "heritage precinct" of similar old homes.

A spokesman for the city's Heritage Advisory Committee said today the matter was discussed at the committee's meeting last week, and although members would prefer to see the building remain where it is they apparently had no strong objections to the move.

Ray said the future of another building on the property, the tourist attraction Land of the Little People, has not been determined. But he added: "If we can save it we probably will."

Levinson said the hotel building would be L-shaped in plan, wrapped around the Captain's Palace. It would have a "stepped back" design along the lines of the nearby Laurel Point condominium block, with a height of five or six storeys. Parking would be underground.

Bank of B.C. to Expand

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Bank of British Columbia plans to double its Victoria branches from two to four by the end of 1978, a company official said today.

The two new branches would be among eight planned for the west during the next 16 months.

H. J. Steele, manager of the main Victoria branch at 752 Fort St., said the company is still looking for sites for the proposed expansion.

"If all goes well we will have two additional branches in this area by the end of next year."

High priority is for sites in Oak Bay and near the Town and Country shopping centre.

The company hopes to open a branch in the Colwood area as well but this would be after 1978, according to present projections.

With four branches in Victoria the bank might consider establishing a regional office here, Steele said. At present the only administration office is the headquarters building in Vancouver.

Steele was elaborating on a report by Richardson Securities of Canada that the Bank of B.C. would likely outperform most other banks during the next 16 months because of its aggressive policy of expansion.

The report said the bank was planning eight new branches by the end of 1978.

Of this total, one would be in Alberta, two in Victoria and the other five would be elsewhere in B.C.

The report by Richardson Securities estimates assets of the Bank of B.C. will total $1.1 billion by year's end, up 36.3 per cent in 12 months.

By contrast the average increase for all banks will be about 19 per cent.

The bank's balance of revenue for the first six months of this year totalled $2.1 billion, up 73 per cent for the same period last year.

First half earnings hit $2.14 per share, up from $1.60 at the same time last year.

Growth will continue to be above-average, but less dramatic in the second half of the year. Earnings for the full year should hit $4.75 per share and rise to $5.75 in 1978, the report says.

Earnings in 1976 totalled $4.05 per share.

Dividends should grow in 1978 because they have been artificially held down by Anti-Inflation Board regulations, the report says.

Dividend this year is expected to be 80 cents per share on earnings of $4.75.

"This tremendous growth in earnings for the bank is a result of a number of factors, improving productivity, better over-all return on assets as the operations of the bank now are maturing, and finally a continued aggressive branch opening campaign resulting in substantial loan and deposit growth," the report says.

"We are confident that the above average growth in both assets and earnings for this bank is likely to continue over the next few years. In fact 1978 promises to be another good year for the bank and we are projecting an approximate 25 per cent increase in balance of revenue after taxes."

Layoffs At CGE

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Lack of business orders is forcing Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd. to lay off about 200 employees by the end of the year, a company spokesman said Monday.

Bruce Martin, manager of employee and community relations, said 60 workers will be laid off in the transportation and equipment section where employment is expected to drop to 20 persons.

Another 36 plant employees, in the wiring cable and switch gear section, have already received layoff notices, effective for various dates until Oct. 9.

"All layoffs are really due to business, the situation is continuing to be rather tight," he said.

A major reason for the layoffs in the transportation department is a probable loss of a major order with the government of Pakistan, he said.

The company is pessimistic the order, which is being affected by the country's uristable political climate, will be signed, he said.

The company now employs 4,050 workers.

By The Canadian Press

With the spotlight focused on games involving the divisional leaders in the Canadian Football League tonight, a crucial match will be fought in the shadows.

Unless Calgary Stampeders — which meet Winnipeg Blue Bombers in one of three games — can turn things around soon, they appear destined to be the first team eliminated from playoff contention.

Despite their 1-4, won-lost record and cellar-dwelling status, Bomber coach Bud Riley believes they may be ready to explode.

"They've got some good people," said Riley whose own team has had trouble putting a consistent game together recently.

"They keep making mistakes, like we do, but one of these days they'll break out of it."

Towards that end, Calgary head coach Jack Gotta has activated offensive tackle Don Sutton in hopes of strengthening an offensive line that allowed eight quarterback sacks in their last encounter with Edmonton Eskimos.

There also have been indications that Matthew Reed, picked up by Calgary after being cut by Toronto Argonauts, may see action in place of usual starting quarterback John Hufnagel.

In the other games, Montreal Alouettes put their undefeated record on the line at home against Ottawa Rough Riders, and British Columbia Lions attempt to move into sole possession of first place in the west when they play the Argonauts in Vancouver.

The Toronto-B.C. game will be televised on the national CBC network at 11 p.m. EDT.

Riley hasn't announced who will start for the Bombers at quarterback but in all likelihood it will be Ralph Brock who has proved he can lead a solid offence against Calgary. The other Bomber pivot, Harry Knight, was the loser in Winnipeg's last game against the Lions.

It promises to be an interesting evening in Vancouver where Toronto middle linebacker Ray Nettles returns for battle against the team that traded him.

He doesn't try to hide the animosity he has for Lions' head coach Vic Rapp, the man who sent Nettles to Toronto for Sam Cvijanovich.

"Rapp didn't get the head coaching job he wanted in Edmonton, so the Lions became his new toy when he got the head job with them," said Nettles who had performed well in B.C. before the trade.

"The general manager said he could do whatever he wanted and he didn't waste any time. I was used as an example. Rapp got every player's attention out there by trading me. They figured if I could go, anyone could. I didn't appreciate him playing with my life.

"The consolation I get from all this is that the guy I was traded for has been released. The Lions thought he was as good as me but I'm the one who is still around."

The Lions are expected to go with the same lineup that defeated Winnipeg last week with the possible exception of defensive back Ted Dushinski who has a sore calf, and offensive tackle Larry Watkins who has a bad back.

"When I get over the Rocky Mountains I feel like I'm in Europe," said Cahill.

"Then I bring my team out here and I see half their team watching us practice and I remember that everybody's crazy out here and I want no part of the place. Vancouver is a nice place to be from, a long way from."

Meanwhile in Montreal, another sellout crowd of over 64,000 is expected at Olympic Stadium as the Als attempt to gain their sixth straight win.

Newcomer Lloyd Grimsrud, a defensive lineman, is expected to see action with the Alouettes in place of the injured Junior Ah You.

Grimsrud said he is looking forward to joining a defence that has allowed only 54 points and three touchdowns in five games.

"I couldn't believe how small they were," said Grimsrud of the defensive lineman.

"My first thought was how the heck can a defence that small hold the opposition to just 11 points a game in five games? I figured they must have something else."

"I've got enough quickness and 250 pounds to do the job, I think," said Grimsrud.

Playoffs Not the Time For Costly Mistakes

It would make it a lot easier on everyone, including themselves, if Victoria Shamrocks would stop making things so close in the Western Lacrosse Association playoffs.

It's not that victory is hard to take — it isn't — but the manner in which the Shamrocks have fashioned their first two victories of the playoffs has left just about everyone limp.

To recap briefly. In Vancouver last Friday the Shamrocks jumped off to a 6-1 lead, allowed Burrards to catch up, twice take the lead and then won in a cliffhanger, 11-10, in the final minute.

Then on Sunday here, the Rocks again assumed command only to falter with the help of some rather ridiculous penalties — unnecessary with the stakes so high — and almost blew the duke to Burrards, barely hanging on for a 16-9 triumph. It shouldn't have happened.

One thing appears certain. They are not a defensive, defensive team. They are good defensively but only when they combine it with their offence. And they were sagging far back on goalkeeper Larry Smeltzer in the closing minutes Sunday leaving the Burrard bombers free to fire their howitzers.

And you can't give shooters like Rico Bellusci, Dave Tasker and Ron Pinder that much leeway no matter how good Smeltzer has been in the nets. Sooner or later they will connect as they did Sunday; and it's fortunate indeed the Irish had a comfortable margin to fall back upon.

But that's been the pattern all season long against Burrards. Close! Shamrocks lost two league games here, each by one goal, and they lost in Vancouver twice, once by a single goal and once by three, in overtime. Which is about as close as two teams can get. In the other games, Shamrocks scored convincing victories but these came after Burrards had wrapped up the league crown. So they can be discounted.

These teams are near equal in strength and talent and it will only take a break one way or another to decide any game. There has been little intimidation, just good, hard hitting. And if the suspended Ward Sanderson wants to parade in the pre-game drill, there's no rule against it and everybody shouldn't get so upset. It's strictly psyche, even childish and isn't working.

Both teams have been sticking to lacrosse, which is good; and the officials have been calling almost everything, which is better. They are also calling the "mouthing" infractions and this is where the inexperience of some of the Shamrocks may have showed on Sunday. This time they got away with it. It would serve their purpse better if there isn't a next time. Burrards are a very good lacrosse team, well coached and can't be granted any liberties. Sunday they scored five power-play goals and two while they had the goalkeeper out of the nets. That was what kept them close. The lesson should be obvious.

Otherwise, a big score for the Jawl Bros. in Seattle with their three-year-old colt Smiley's Dream winning the Longacres Derby. Earlier there had been a stakes win at Ex-Park and next on the list will be the B.C. Derby for the son of Kentucky Derby winner, Dust Commander.

It must have been thrilling, too, for another Victorian, Neil DeMacedo, to see his three-year-old First Purchase in the lead with only a sixteenth of a mile to go. First Purchase was at boxcars on the tote board and, as they say in the trade, just missed. Now the question is, will First Purchase be able to negotiate the tighter turns at Ex-Park better than Smiley's Dream or not? Longacres is a mile track compared to the five-eighths oval at Ex-Park.

And also, another Island owner, George Harknett, just missed with his fine filly Major Hike in Saturday's Aiki Handicap at Longacres. Major Hike made up 16 lengths in the stretch to finish third, beaten four lengths by Pacara and Silky Steel. And the next big event at Longacres is the Longacres Mile Sunday and don't think a B.C. horse can't win that. Defrimental is in at 120 pounds and has a shot.

The delay in the start of the WLA playoff game here Sunday was through no fault of Burrards or the WLA. Planes don't fly when they're unserviceable and that's what happened. Matter of fact the Shamrocks were forced to spend one night on the mainland this season when the pilot for their plane didn't show up. But that's life in the WLA. And here's one, too. Sunday's game took two hours to play. On regular home nights, it usually is a two-hour and 15-minute evening. There's a message there.

Connors Connects

CHESTNUT HILL, Mass. (AP) — Jimmy Connors, battling to retain his No. 1 position in the Association of Tennis Pros rankings, rallied for a 3-6, 6-1, 6-4 victory over Marty Riessen on Monday night in an opening-round match of the 50th United States pro championships.

Connors, plagued by a hand injury and beaten badly in two tournaments since bowing to Bjorn Borg in the Wimbledon final, had to pull out all stops against Riessen, a 35-year-old warhorse.

Top-seeded in a bid to capture the title he won here in 1973, Connors fell behind quickly as he lost his serve in the second game. He broke back in the third game, but lost on his service at love in the sixth and was broken again in the eighth.

Unseeded John McEnroe, an 18-year-old from Douglaston, N.Y., who went to the Wimbledon semi-finals, advanced to a second-round showdown with Connors. Playing in only his 10th pro tournament, McEnroe disposed of France's Chris Roger-Vasselin 6-3, 6-0.

Second-seeded Brian Gottfried beat Brian Teacher of the U.S., 4-6, 6-4, 6-3 in an earlier match.

Victoria Bowlers Share Top Berth

EDMONTON — Victoria bowlers are still in serious contention in the Canadian lawn bowling championships.

The Burnside club triples rink of Jessie Kinneard, Flora Martin and Marie Sage won two games and lost one Monday to share the lead in the seven-rink, round-robin competition with a 3-1 record while Carole McGregor of Victoria West has a similar mark for second place in the women's singles event.

Kinneard defeated Prince Edward Island 25-9, and Nova Scotia 13-11 before losing to Ontario, 21-13. Alberta and Manitoba are tied with Kinneard.

McGregor, who lost her opening singles match Sunday, won from Brenda Finlayson of Ontario, 21-13, Beryl Durling of Nova Scotia 21-12, and Sheilagh Sprott of Quebec 21-4, Monday.

Ann Watson of Winnipeg won three games Monday and is the singles leader with a 4-0 record.

Other B.C. representatives are holding excellent positions in their bids for titles.

In women's pairs, Selina Silva and Dorothy Macey of Vancouver lead with a 4-0 record. Ontario and Prince Edward Island are tied for second.

Tom Jarvis of Vancouver won three matches Monday to take the lead in the men's singles with a 4-0 mark. He defeated Saskatchewan 21-18, P.E.I. 21-13, and Manitoba 21-16. Three provinces are tied for second at 3-1.

In men's pairs, John Henderson of Vancouver, president of the International Bowling Board, and his partner, Lou Sousae, share first place with a 3-1 mark while Graham, Jarvis, brother of Tom, has his rink tied for first place with Ontario with a 4-0 record.

CAROL McGREGOR

Fifth and sixth rounds were scheduled today with the final round Wednesday morning. If playoffs are necessary, they will take place Wednesday afternoon.

'Fear' of Hoop Coach Didn't Affect Players

SOFIA, Bulgaria (CP) — Coach Jack Donohue was "scared to death" Monday before the Canadian national basketball team met Czechoslovakia in the first round of semi-finals at the World University Student Games.

But it didn't rub off on the players, and it didn't affect Donohue's thinking.

He installed a four-and-one defence to control the Czech offence and urged floor general Martin Riley to concentrate on ball control. With few exceptions, everything worked perfectly and Canada emerged with a 66-63 victory.

Donohue said the Canadians — paced by Jamie Russell's 22 points and Lars Hansen's 18— opened a 14-4 lead in the early minutes, but had to battle back for a 32-32 halftime tie.

"I knew we weren't going to run them out of the park," said Donohue, in his fifth year as national coach. "Czechoslovakia is too experienced for that."

Canada conceded a couple of easy baskets in the final moments while eating up the clock.

"The game wasn't as close as the score," said Donohue. "I thought we might be a year away from playing a game this good.

"When I came here, my objective was to get us into the top eight—call it the major leagues of international basketball, if you like.

"Well, we're there. One of these days, we're going to step up and win something major. I know we're improving. Maybe we're still short on consistency, but we're coming."

The basketball success, a consolation women's volleyball victory and two upsets in Greco-Roman wrestling saved Canada from a fruitless day as track and field athletes were blanked.

Joe Dell' Aquila of Toronto, in his first year of Greco-Roman, defeated Jose Escobar of Cuba with a strong comeback in the first round, but was disqualified for his lack of aggression in his second-round match with Mehmet Uysel of Turkey. Howard Stupp of Montreal won by disqualification against Marcel Mualek of Algeria in the first round but was pinned in the second round by Seafn Rusu of Romania.

In women's volleyball, Canada defeated Mongolia 15-12, 15-4, 15-5 as expected.

Discus competitors Jane Haist of Fenwick, Ont., and Lucette Moreau of Pointe des Cascades, Que., finished sixth and eighth, respectively, in the final event.

John Corrazza of Ottawa finished 10th among qualifiers for the men's javelin. His best toss was 75.4 metres, far below the leading 82.14 by Vasily Archov of the Soviet Union.

Peter Stir of Vancouver, a University of Oregon student, finished sixth in his 1,500-metre heat and did not advance, while Penny Werthner of Ottawa and Debbie Scott of Victoria were eliminated in separate trials.

Werthner was sixth in 4:16.7 in the first heat and Scott eighth in the second at 4:25.1.

The women's 4x100-metre relay team finished last in its heat, while the men's team finished fourth and had a chance to qualify for the final.

Liz Damman of Kitchener, Ont., Patty Loverock and Margot Howe, both of Vancouver and Jean Sparling of Ottawa ran for the women, while Marv Nash of Montreal, Brian Saunders and Cole Doty, both of Toronto and Dacre Bowen of Calgary formed the men's team.

RANGERS TO TRY PRACTICAL JOKER

NEW YORK (AP) — A man who was known as a practical joker during his National Hockey League playing days now finds himself behind the bench of New York Rangers, and he says the first order of business will be to gain the respect of his team.

Jean-Guy Talbot, John Ferguson's assistant coach last season when the Rangers failed to make the Stanley Cup playoffs for the second consecutive season, was officially given the head coaching job Monday. Ferguson remains as general manager.

"I think there were some problems here last year, so I'm going to have to get respect from the players," Talbot said, agreeing to what he called a multi-year contract.

Al Arbour, coach of the crosstown Islanders, said: "Jean-Guy used to be a great practical joker. He liked to play tricks on the guys, like autographing their white shoes with a black magic marker."

But that was back in the late 1960s when Arbour and Talbot both were defencemen with St. Louis Blues.

Talbot is taking a get-tough stance with the Rangers. He promised to have a "tough training camp," starting Sept. 10.

Shamrock Sniper Playoff Leader

Ivan Thompson of Victoria Shamrocks has the playoff scoring lead in the Western Lacrosse Association and another Shamrock, Ron MacNeil, is tied for second place as the Shamrocks and Vancouver Burrards prepare to meet in the third game of the best-of-seven final at Vancouver tonight.

Shamrocks lead the series 2-0. Fourth game is set for Victoria's Memorial Arena Thursday.

In seven games, Thompson has 19 goals and 18 assists for 37 points and MacNeil has 13 goals and 15 assists for 28 points.

Tied with MacNeil are Dave Tasker and Dave Litzenberger of Burrards. Tasker has 13 goals and 15 assists and Litzenberger 10 goals and 18 assists.

Charn Dhillon is the only doubtful starter for the Shamrocks tonight as he is still suffering from an injured ankle. Junior recruits Steve Buckley and Doug Angrove of McDonalds will play for the Shamrocks.

F.A. Plans to Act Against Violence

LONDON (AP) — The English Football Association is ready to lend its support in an attempt to quash the sort of violence which broke out Saturday during the opening day of the English League soccer season.

Ted Croker, secretary of the association, said Monday:

"There is no limit to the sanctions we could take, but any decision would be taken in conjunction with the league.

"The trouble continues, something must be done. We have not discussed it with the league yet. We have not seen full reports of what happened last Saturday, but if we agree there was an excess of trouble, we would have to discuss what action to take."

One of the worst of Saturday's incidents was at a cafe on a main roadway at Leeming in Yorkshire, where several hundred Leeds and Sunderland fans clashed.

"We have little authority outside of grounds, but we could take action against the clubs and stadiums concerned," Croker said. "In the past grounds have been closed for spectator misconduct. It is quite common in European soccer, but not in the Football League."

Scotland fans will find themselves fenced in, should the World Cup qualifying game against Wales be shifted to London's Wembley Stadium.

An official limit of 14,050 spectators has been put on the Ninian Park stadium at Cardiff and if this is not raised to a minimum of 25,000 the Welsh FA will be forced to switch the game to Wembley.

Wembley authorities don't want to risk a repetition of incidents which followed Scotland's British championship win over England in June, when supporters made an after match invasion of the pitch and ripped up turf.

"If they come to us, it is extremely likely we would put fences up," said Wembley official Len Went.

MARINERS GET PITCHER

One soccer fan was sentenced Monday to three months in prison and another was fined $3,332 following violence at two of Saturday's matches at Birmingham. The matches involved Birmingham and Manchester United and West Bromwich Albion and Chelsea.

Police told Birmingham court of running battles between Manchester and Chelsea fans who arrived at Birmingham's new railroad station, four hours before the kickoff. Terence Saville, 25, arrested at the station for using threatening behavior eight days after being released from prison, admitted the offence and also stealing a pork pie and a cheese sandwich from the station buffet.

At Hull, fines of $170 each were imposed on 10 fans following their arrests during Hull City's game with Sunderland.

DERBY COUNTY BANS UNITED FOLLOWERS

LONDON (AP) — Derby County took action against soccer hooligans Monday by banning Manchester United fans from an English League First Division game on Sept. 3.

Two vouchers will be issued to every spectator at Wednesday's game against Ipswich and only they, and season ticketholders, will be allowed into watch the match against United.

"We want to make it a family afternoon out," said a Derby spokesman. "We want to curb the hooligan element and are not issuing tickets of any description to United."

"People are getting fed up with the trouble. If we had let United fans come as other clubs may do — we may have had a full house but would have lost about 6,000 of our own fans in the process. This way the crowd may not be as big, but in the long run we hope it will encourage our own supporters to come."

Always Gallant Flies

CHICAGO (AP) — Mr. Steel raced to his fourth consecutive victory in the feature at Arlington Park on Monday, but the attention went to the seventh-race winner, Always Gallant, who ran one of the fastest miles in the history of racing.

Always Gallant, the three-year-old son of Gallant Romeo owned by Joe LaCroix of Florida, was clocked in 1:33 3-5. Only 13 horses in the history of thoroughbred racing, including Secretariat, have been timed faster.

The record is held by Dr. Fager, who raced in 1:32 1-5 in the 1968 Washington Park Handicap at Arlington. Secretariat's fastest clocking was 1:33 2-5 as a three-year-old at Aqueduct in New York.

Development Program Enjoyed by Beauchemin

If you would have asked Bob Beauchemin about his plans for the coming winter three weeks ago, he probably would have said he was going to settle into a job and hang around Victoria for the next four or five months.

Now, he's not so sure.

The past three weeks may have changed his mind. In that time, he finished fifth in the Saskatchewan Open and tacked on a tied-for-sixth performance in the B.C. Open. In the process, he has picked up just over $2,000 in prize money.

"I now can say I've made more money than I've spent this season," said the 23-year-old southpaw.

It hasn't been easy. Quietly and without fanfare, the Victoria-reared golfer turned pro last year in order to become a regular on the Canadian tour. Going on his own, without the benefit of a sponsor or outside backing, Beauchemin spent much more than he earned for the first several months.

Lately, things started to change. He was five under par for his three rounds in Saskatchewan. And a five under-208 was his figure in the B.C. Open.

"Yes," he admitted Monday, "I'm playing well . . . and getting better. Actually, I've had only one round over 74 during the entire tour but things didn't fall into place until the past three weeks."

And the credit, Beauchemin wants it known, has to go to Al Balding and Ben Kern . . . and Gil Blechman. The three are the principals in a "development" program at the National Golf Club in Woodbridge, Ont., designed to groom young players for tournament play.

Blechman, owner of the National, had the idea. Balding and Kern, in charge of golf at the Woodbridge course, made it go.

Their program attracted six Ontario players — Scott Knapp, Erin Fostey, Terry Miskolczi, Ian Davidson, Doug Warner and Kelly Roberts — and one "foreigner"—Beauchemin.

The six-week program is intended to give promising youngsters an opportunity to get high calibre coaching.

"They put refinement into my game and gave me an understanding of golf. They didn't change my swing or anything like that. They made me work with what I had and in doing so, confirmed some of the things I thought I knew. That confirmation gave me confidence.

"I learned to be a professional and how to turn a 77 into a 73. As an amateur, if I was five over after five holes, I had a tendency to pack it in. As a pro, I have the confidence to keep going and start looking for bordies."

Unfortunately, says Beauchemin, there is no assurance that the Woodbridge program will continue. Blechman, Balding and Kern, all have a great desire to help develop a Canadian player who, some day, may be able to win the Canadian Open.

The recipe for nationalism was the time and money they spent on the six young pros.

"I think they're all prepared to donate their time indefinitely, but money is another matter," said Beauchemin. "If the program is to survive, they're going to need some help in the funding of it."

In the meantime, Beauchemin has to start thinking about his next route. The immediate plans are participation in the Metro-Toyota tournament at Cedar Hill during the Labor Day weekend and the B.C.P.G.A. tournament the following week in Vancouver.

After that?

"I'm not sure," said Bob. "I'm happy with the way my game is improving. If nothing better pops up, I wouldn't mind playing in some (mini-tour) tournaments in California and Arizona during the winter."

And as future plans go, he came within one stroke of making it into the 1978 Canadian Open. Both Dave Barr, the winner, and runnerup Doug Roxburgh had previously earned exemption into the Open.

The exemption goes to the leading Canadian in each provincial open. Vancouver assistant Norm Jarvis, finishing a stroke ahead of Beauchemin, won it.

"That was my big disappointment in the B.C. Open," concluded Beauchemin. "I would have rather won that than the cheque I got."

★ ★ ★

SHORT CHIPS: Another Victorian, John Morgan also was a big winner in the B.C. Open . . . Morgan won $215 for finishing in a tie for 20th place but also claimed $1,500 in stereo equipment as a KP (closest to the pin) prize . . . Herb Brown picked a good time to tap Oak Bay's hole-in-one fund . . . He scored an ace on the second hole during Saturday's greensome competition . . . Jim and Barbara Berry shared top honors in the greensome with Bill and Marg Graham . . . And here's a reminder that entries close Wednesday for the annual Vancouver Island senior women's tournament to be played at Cedar Hill on Sept. 9 . . .

Carson Scores In Masters

Carson, competing in the 50 to 59 age bracket, won the 400 and 800 metre running events as well as the discus and javelin.

Rafe Duke won the 100 and 200 metre events in the 40-49 bracket and Jack Rowe collected victories in the 200 metres and the 400-metre hurdles for 50-59 competitors.

Two other club members won single events. Don Wilson (50-59) won the high jump and Derek Ellis (40-49) finished first in the 5,000 metres.

Earlier this month, Roger Ruth of Victoria collected a gold medal by winning the pole vault in the 45-49 class at the world masters championships in Gothenburg, Sweden.

Ruth also placed sixth in the high jump and eighth in the triple jump while Gerard Dumas of the "Y" placed sixth in the pole vault.

Freed's three-run pinch homer with one out capped a seven-run rally in the bottom of the ninth inning and lifted St. Louis Cardinals to an 8-6 victory over Los Angeles Dodgers in National League play. It was the fourth home run of the season for the 31-year-old utility man, who is batting .356 in sparse action with the Cardinals after twice winning minor league player-of-the-year honors.

"I knew my mother was watching," Freed said. "I kept telling myself I was going to hit one for mom. She never gives up until the game's over. She's been a baseball rooter ever since I was in Little League."

Despite the loss, the Dodgers remained 9½ games ahead of Cincinnati in the West Division when Montreal Expos downed the Reds 5-1. Inthe East, Philadelphia Phillies increased their lead to 7½ games over Pittsburgh by edging Atlanta Braves 5-4, while the Pirates were dropping a 1-0 squeaker to San Diego Padres.

Los Angeles had built a 6-1 lead on Steve Yeager's grand slam in a five-run third inning and a run-scoring infield hit in the ninth by 41-year-old Vic Davalillo. They were his first two hits in the majors since 1974.

Then the Cardinals erupted against starter Burt Hooton and relievers Lance Rautzhan and Charlie Hough.

Jerry Mumphrey started the rally with a single and Garry Templeton tripled off Hooton who then gave way to Rautzhan. Ted Simmons delivered a run-scoring single and scored on a double by Keith Hernandez and an error by shortstop Bill Russell, chasing Rautzhan and bringing on Hough.

Hernandez scored when a pitch by the knuckleballer got away from Yeager for a passed ball. Hough retired the next batter, but Ken Reitz and Mike Tyson singled and Freed, batting for winning pitcher Al Hrabosky, whacked the Cardinals' first pinch homer of the season.

Rookie Sam Mejias drilled three hits and made a sensational catch in centre field and Warren Cromartie hit a two-run homer to help Wayne Twitchell post his fourth victory and second over the Reds. Mejias socked two doubles and a single, scored one run, drove in another and grabbed Mike Lum's line drive in the seventh inning with a sliding, one-handed catch.

Pinch-hitter Tim McCarver of the Phillies started a tie-breaking two-run seventh inning with a walk and ended up scoring the winning run from third when Braves catcher Pat Rockett made a throwing error.

In the American League, Larry Hisle of Minnesota singled home the winning run off Bill Campbell to help Minnesota edge Boston Red Sox 5-4. It was his 98th run-batted-in of the season.

The hit kept the third-place Twins one game behind Kansas City Royals, two percentage points behind Chicago White Sox and one-half game in front of fourth-place Texas Rangers in the crowded West Division race.

In other American League action, Oakland A's bested Toronto Blue Jays 5-2, Kansas City nipped Baltimore Orioles 8-7, Chicago whipped New York Yankees 5-3, Texas edged Milwaukee Brewers 8-7, Detroit Tigers defeated California Angels 5-1 and Cleveland Indians defeated Seattle 12-1 in the first game before the Mariners won the second 4-3.

The Twins rocked Boston starter Rick Wise and reliever Bill Lee for six hits and four runs in the second inning. Glenn Adams slammed a 440-foot home run to start the inning, Butch Wynegar doubled home another run and Hisle and Rod Carew contributed RBI singles.

The Red Sox, who lead the AL East by one-half game over the Yankees, scored an unearned run in the first off Twins starter Paul Thormodgard. Fred Lynn added a homer in the eighth and Boston tied the game 4-4 with two out in the top of the ninth on Bucky Hobson's two-run homer.

IT'S DEMOLITION TIME AT WESTERN

There hasn't been a rainout this season at Western Speedway, so it's hardly surprising that officials are slipping some extra events into the schedule.

Wednesday night is one of them when 40 to 45 cars are expected to take part in a demolition derby, the second of the summer here. Last Saturday night's turnout for the hobby stock races got a preview of the wreck'em derby when several abbreviated events were staged.

Wednesday's show, which starts with time trials at 7 p.m. with racing at 8, features trophy dashes, heats, eliminations, a possible powder-puff race and cat-and-mouse chases.

Ironically, the closest Western came to a rainout this year was the first demolition derby July 16. A suppertime downpour threatened to wash out the show, but the weather cleared and more than 2,000 turned out.

Track manager Tony Mortel also plans two additional racing dates in October, one of them a road-course race for stock cars. Sunday, Oct. 9, has been earmarked for the event, the first at Western Speedway in several years.

The race, tentatively set for Western's sports car circuit, would involve both local superstocks and open competition cars. Officials and equipment would be provided by the Victoria Motorsport Club.

"I've sounded out several stock car drivers and most of them are interested," Mortel said. "They had a similar race here for local stock cars a few years ago without much success, but this would be the first time open competition cars have raced."

The only other road circuit competition for stock cars on the West Coast involves NASCAR racing at Riverside Raceway in California and the occasional NASCAR race on Vancouver's Westwood circuit. The last one there, however, was two years ago.

Meanwhile, Mortel also plans an extra night of racing Saturday, Oct. 1.

Barlow Wins Net Opener

MONTREAL (CP) — Top-seeded Wendy Barlow of Victoria romped to a 6-0, 6-0 win over Sherry Low of Winnipeg Monday as play got underway in the Canadian closed junior tennis championships.

Most of the seeded players advanced in the women's competition but four of the eight top seeds were upset in men's play.

Unseeded Mike Roberts of Vancouver toppled No. 1 seed Colin McAlpin of Deep River, Ont., 6-3, 6-4 while another Vancouver player, Bill Geddes knocked off third-seeded Greg Boire of Montreal. Sixth-seeded Bill Cowan of Toronto and eighth-seeded Martin Wostenholme of Ottawa were other upset victims.

Cables Clipped

NEW WESTMINSTER — Jim Poelzer closed the gates on Burnaby Cablevision Monday night as New Westminster Salmonbellies scored their first win of the Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League final.

The Salmonbellies goaltender stopped 48 shots and picked up three assists as New Westminster downed Burnaby 12-5 before a crowd of about 1,100 at Queens Park Arena.

The loss was only the second of the season and the first in the playoffs for Burnaby which leads the best-of-seven series, 3-1. The fifth game is tonight at Burnaby.

BAYS CRUSH OTTAWA CLUB

OTTAWA — James Bay Athletic Association continued its winning tour through Canada with a 20-6 victory over Ottawa Beavers and boosted their record to 4-1 Monday.

The Vancouver Island Rugby Union club dominated scrimmages and lineouts but had trouble finishing plays for tries.

Tom Lippa suffered what is believed to be a broken bone in his ankle during the match and is expected to miss a match against Ottawa Indians on Wednesday.

Stormy Weather Halts Yacht Trial

NEWPORT, R.I. (Reuter) — Strong winds and rain forced abandonment of a scheduled race Monday between America's Cup contenders Courageous and Enterprise.

The two American 12-metre yachts went to the rendezvous on Rhode Island Sound and circled in the starting area for about an hour until the New York Yacht Club's selection committee decided the weather was too bad for racing.

The two foreign yachts still in contention, Australia and Sverige, were idle Monday, preparing for their best-of-seven final series beginning Thursday.

Sverige, which represents the first Swedish challenge in the Cup's 126-year history, took Gretel II out of the challenge by winning the final race in the best four-of-seven series by one minute and 58 seconds.

They were tied at three victories apiece going into Sunday's match.

Gretel II challenged once before, losing to Intrepid 4-1 in 1970. She is wood-hulled like France I and France II while all the other 12 metres in the 1977 races are aluminum.

The Gretel II-Sverige series marked the first time in challenger competition that two yachts have gone the full seven races.

Frank Hegyi Heads Tourney Committee

Frank Hegyi has been named chairman of the Western Canada Regional Oldtimers Hockey Tournament which will be held in the Greater Victoria area, January 13-15, 1978.

The tournament will consist of a minimum of 48 teams and a maximum of 64.

Other members of the committee include: Bill Shaw, vice-chairman; Don Hamilton, finance; Bill James and Eric Hammer, special events; Bill Shaw, opening and closing ceremonies; Norm Martin, team host; Jack Blain, communications; Mickey Doneley, tournament headquarters; Glen Burns, transportation; Brian Gingel, arena co-ordinator; James and Hammer, publicity; Ken King, local and provincial assistance; Mark Flynn, souvenir program and tournament souvenirs; Doug Morton, minor officials; Don Bold, referee-in-chief; Dan Doneley, registration; Laureen Lortie, recording secretary and accommodations; George Stewart, statistics.

Chairpersons are needed for two committees, ticket-marketing and medical. Interested parties should contact Hegyi at 477-0709.

Canadians Place 4th

HILO, Ha. — China won both the men's and women's titles in the fourth annual Pacific Rim Junior Volleyball Tournament which ended on the weekend.

Canada finished fourth in the six-team women's division losing 15-4, 15-1, 15-12, to Japan in the bronze medal match. Canada's men were winless in finishing last in the eight-team division.

China won all but one of its games in both men's and women's play. The Chinese men beat Mexico, 15-12, 15-9, 15-7 in the final and the Chinese women overwhelmed two-time champion U.S. by 15-5, 15-10, 15-9.

O.C. SOCCER

LONDON (CP) — Results of soccer games played Monday in the United Kingdom:

ENGLISH LEAGUE
DIVISION III
Wrexham 2, Oxford 2.
DIVISION IV
Brentford 4, Wimoledon 1.
ANGLO-SCOTTISH CUP
SCOTTISH SECTION SECOND LEG
Ayr 2, Hibernian 2.
(Hibernian wins 4-3 on aggregate).

WINNER of the men's single title at the Canadian Open tennis championships in Toronto, Monday, Jeff Borowiak of California, took only 44 minutes to dispose of Jaime Fillol of Chile, 6-0, 6-1. It was Borowiak's third tournament win and worth $20,000 first prize. In the men's doubles final, top-seeded Bob Hewitt of South Africa and Raul Ramirez of Mexico defeated Sherwood Stewart and Fred McNair, both of the United States, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2 to split $7,500.

Beacon Hill Club Wraps Up Title

With only one week remaining, the Beacon Hill Park club has 30 points while runner-up Burnside has 23. Other clubs in the league are Gordon Head (22 points), Oak Bay (20), Lakehill (19) and Victoria West (18).

DRIVING RAIN PELTS ROWERS

AMSTERDAM (AP) — United States, Britain and Czechoslovakia won second-chance repechages in the women's double sculls at the world rowing championships Monday to move to the semi-final round.

The women provided most of the activity on the lightest program so far of the nine-day regatta that opened last Saturday.

Cheryl Howard of Vancouver, nursing a sore back, and Bev Cameron of Ottawa finished second in their repechage with a time of three minutes 45.16 seconds on the 1,000-metre women's course.

They placed fifth in a six-boat heat Saturday which put them on the repechage side.

The only other event was a qualifying repechage heat in the men's lightweight single sculls. This was won easily by Anthony Corcoran of Ireland, who qualified for the lightweight semi-finals Thursday, with a clocking of 8:12.26 on the mens' 2,000-metre course.

The big surprise of the heat was the second-place finish by Japan's Mitsunobu Nitta, who drew cheers from the scattering of rain-soaked spectators along the shore. Nitta, who finished in 8:19.89, and third-place finisher Peter Zeun, 8:22.62, also qualified for the semi-finals for lightweights.

A driving rain swept the six lane Bosbaan course throughout the hour that it took to run off the four races.

In the men's events Sunday, cox Dale Bannerman of Victoria urged the Canadian eight to a third-place finish in the second heat with a time of 6:18.69.

Church Union Dormant

CALGARY (CP) — Union between the United Church of Canada and the Anglican Church of Canada appears to be a dormant issue, Rev. Donald Ray, secretary of the United Church general council, said Monday.

Ray told a news conference at the opening of the United Church's 27th council that it was unlikely any decision for union between the two largest Protestant churches in Canada would be made at the current general council.

Ray said that although talks between Anglicans and the United Church broke off in 1975, they were still involved in a number of joint works, including Project North, an inter-church agency that helps inform southern churches about land claims by Indians and Eskimos in the North.

Meanwhile, he said discussions on union are continuing between the United Church and the Disciples of Christ and the Roman Catholic Church.

The United Church has about two million members, the Anglican Church about 1.5 million. The Disciples of Christ have about 12,000 members and the Roman Catholic Church about 10 million in Canada.

TUTTLE

Edmonton Cleric Chosen

CALGARY (CP) — Rt. Rev. George Tuttle of Edmonton, elected Monday as moderator of the United Church of Canada, says he is pleased with the way some churches are saying that "mission must be tied to justice."

"We are part of a whole system that makes the rich richer and the poor poorer and we have no business talking about mission apart from justice," Tuttle said at a news conference after his election.

"We can make more mistakes by being against the poor than by being for them."

Tuttle was chosen for the chief executive officer's position on the fifth and final ballot, defeating Rev. A. C. Forrest of Toronto, editor and publisher of the United Church Observer, the church's official house organ.

The new moderator, principal of St. Stephen's College — a theological college on the University of Alberta campus — also told reporters the church must eventually have a woman as moderator.

"One of these days we are going to have a woman moderator," he said. "We've got to have one."

He said he is interested in discovering something about the church's identity in a Biblical context.

"That is not to say we should be staying back, but so we can stay out in front," he said. "I think it's the most important thing that can happen to our church."

Tuttle said there should be a better way of voting for a moderator.

"I am not entirely convinced that we have the right system for the elections because far too many of our people are not really knowledgeable about whom they are voting for."

When there are ballots, "inevitably there is a political feeling," he said.

Tuttle said his election marked the first time that a father-son combination had held the moderator's office, noting that his father, Aubrey, had held the post in 1940-42.

Born Oct. 4, 1915, in Medicine Hat, Alta., the new moderator attended Edmonton schools and graduated from St. Stephens College in 1941 with a gold medal in theology.

He took some graduate studies at Queen's University in Kingston, Ont., and later attended Victoria College, Toronto, where he earned a doctorate in theology.

He has had a wide church experience, including several mission fields, a pastorate in Sangudo, Alta., and a term as assistant minister in Toronto.

MP Seeks File, Gets Evasions

OTTAWA (CP) — The solicitor-general's department has refused to tell Ed Broadbent whether the RCMP has put together a security file on him and other MPs, the NDP leader charged today.

Broadbent told a news conference that he has written Prime Minister Trudeau asking him in intervene in the "important civil liberties matter" raised by newspaper allegations that the RCMP maintains secret coded files on the personal and political lives of MPs and senior government officials.

Broadbent also wrote Solicitor-General Francis Fox Aug. 12 asking whether it was true that the force had a file on him.

Since then, Broadbent said, he had received nothing but evasions from Fox's office.

The NDP leader said he would have expected a "prompt denial" from the solicitor-general's office if no file existed.

By stalling and giving him vauge answers, Broadbent said the solicitor-general's office has added substance to the allegations that the RCMP compiles such files.

In his letter to Trudeau, Broadbent says he is confident the prime minister will give the matter his attention because of his past concern about civil liberties.

Fox's executive assistant promised to clear up the matter Monday, the NDP leader said. But Broadbent said he again received nothing but "stalling and vague replies."

Earlier this month, the Toronto Globe and Mail reported that the RCMP gathers information on political figures secretly, using electronic bugging equipment.

RCMP Commissioner Maurice Nadon said the reports were inaccurate.

COAST GUARD VOLUNTEER BILLS OTTAWA

CAMPBELL RIVER — Volunteer coast guard agent Robert Sommerville has sent the department of defence a bill for $650,000 for "services rendered."

Sommerville knows he isn't going to collect. It's his way of getting the message across to Defence Minister Barney Danson that Campbell River needs a coast guard station.

Noting that the department last year funded a coast guard station off Bamfield, Sommerville in his letter to Danson said a station should be provided at Campbell River "or you can reimburse us the equivalent of the Bamfield budget of $130,000 a year for a total of $650,000 over the last five years as a token payment for services rendered.

"As far as Campbell River is concerned," Sommerville continued, "we are running out of voluntary funds and volunteers to maintain and operate the 20-plus seaplanes, five-plus helicopters, 50-plus vessels, Bill Pugh rescue net, pumps, medical air-evac kit, diving facilities, communications centre and film and lecture facilities."

And Sommerville won't be satisfied with another federal study of Campbell River's needs.

"It would appear to be just another task force — number five — that has no real power as a committee other than to recommend. It will probably be largely ignored just as the previous ones have been and will probably be followed by No. 6, etc."

CHILD BEATING PROGRAM ON TV

The Victoria branch of the B.C. Association of Social Workers will present a Cable 10 program at 7 p.m. Thursday on child battering.

Guests on the show will include Victoria physician Dr. Brian Pound as well as a representative from Parents in Crisis, a local group of parents, who have battered their children.

Appearing as moderators on the program will be June Preston, president of the social workers' association Victoria branch, and Victoria social worker Brian Shields.

The hour-long show also allows for telephone calls from viewers.

Preston said the program will examine why people batter their children, what help is available for battered children, and what action is being taken to help reduce the instances of child abuse.

The program is the 13th in a series of 14 summer programs which the social workers have sponsored on the kinds of social services available in the Victoria area.

Theft Cuts Aid, Hungry Dying

LONDON (UPI) — Drought and corruption among relief officials have aggravated a famine in the northern part of the West African nation of Ghana, a British relief agency reports.

The Oxford Committee on Famine Relief and its staff in the region blamed the rising number of starvation deaths on corruption among officials responsible for distributing supplies and food prices four and five times higher than normal.

"Food is not reaching those who need it because those who don't need it are taking supplies for their own ends," said an agency report obtained Monday from Bolgatanga near the northern border with Upper Volta.

"This is not directly the fault of the national government, who are successfully getting food to the north, but reflects the gross irregularities among regional officials in the north, especially local district chief executives and regional commissioners, but pervading throughout the local structure..

"Deaths relating to starvation are only taking place in village pockets where the poorest, such as lepers, the blind, the elderly and the mad are not able to travel to the source of food in the towns," the report said.

The report said the problem was not so much the supply of food donated by U.S. and European relief agencies or its transport from the south to the north, but rather losses once the supplies reached the north.

It said one foreigner working in the region estimated 50 per cent of the food aid was lost to local officials' "friends, workkers, bank managers."

"The present situation in the north reflects a bad situation which has got worse," the foreigner said. "There is every likelihood that the situation will get worse day by day."

Drought was complicating the problem.

"Rainfall has varied from village to village and even from field to field," the report said. "Early millet should be harvested by the end of August, but the crop has been destroyed in some areas through lack of rain."

4-H Clubs At PNE Test

VANCOUVER (CP) — Showmanship honors were divided between Fraser Valley and Vancouver Island 4-H entries during the weekend at the Pacific National Exhibition.

In dairy showmanship, senior champion was Rod Rendle of Saanich. Reserved senior champion was Leo de Groot of Chilliwack. Both boys are 16 years of age.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

The preliminary hearing of two Greater Victoria men charged with secret commissions and conspiracy to obstruct justice by destroying documents in connection with bank loans began Monday in Victoria provincial court before Judge Fred Green.

Charged are former president of the Unity Bank of Canada Richard Brian Higgins, 42, of 1641 McKenzie Avenue, and developer William Alfred Estgage, 43, of 724 Mount Newton Cross Road.

The crown alleges that Higgins gave favorable consideration to credit applications by developers in exchange for sharing in the profits. Eastgate, it is alleged, offered benefits in exchange for favorable consideration.

The charges against the two were laid May 11 after a joint investigation in Victoria and Toronto by the RCMP's commercial crime sections.

The alleged offences date to 1973.

There is a publication ban on the proceedings which are expected to last for eight days.

Economy 'Ottawa's Fault'

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

The federal government must take the lion's share of the blame for the nation's serious economic problems Premier Bill Bennett charged Monday.

"Our country's in very severe economic difficulties at this time," said Bennett at a press conference on returning from the premiers' conference in St. Andrews, New Brunswick.

Bennett said the federal government is largely to blame for the situation because Ottawa has failed to adequately respond to the problem.

He said that by devaluing the Canadian dollar the government "is only masking the problem" and is failing to get to the root of the matter.

"The answer is to clean up our act and improve our productivity," said Bennett.

"The federal government has the opportunityfto get the economy rolling . . . (but) the situation hasn't improved."

He said B.C.'s economic picture is brightening, "but we're going against the Canadian momentum."

Bennett said a national strategy has to be worked out between the provinces and the federal government if the country is to come to grips with its economic woes.

He said B.C. made that point at the premiers' conference and intends to pursue the matter further with Ottawa.

"Now is the time for the provincial and federal governments to get together on a strategy for Canada," he said.

BENNETT
. . . strategy needed

I WAS WRONG, SAYS BENNETT

Several weeks ago Premier Bill Bennett said he was prepared to stake his reputation on a bet that there would be a federal election this fall — Monday he did a complete about face.

"My reputation's been tarnished," he said bluntly. "I was one hundred per cent wrong."

Bennett said the premiers' conference in St. Andrews, New Brunswick, convinced him that he had mis-read the political winds with his election predictions.

Asked if he thought there'd be an election next year, Bennett took a decidedly cautious approach.

"The chances increase," he said.

Sooner Or Later . . .

The current summer session of the B.C. legislature could wrap up this week — or then again it could drag on well into October, Premier Bill Bennett said Monday.

"It could be finished this week, or it could be two months," said Bennett when asked to predict when the session might end. "It's up to the opposition."

The legislature had 33 bills before it as of Monday and Bennett said the government plans to introduce at least three more major bills before the session is complete.

"If they (the opposition) can clear the decks we can get at all the legislation that's waiting in the wings," he said.

Cocke Keeps Chipping At Surrey Dodge Case

The issue is currently the subject of multiple investigations.

Dennis Cocke (NDP-New Westminster), who has been spearheading the opposition's pursuit of Kerster, (SC-Coquitlam), asked Finance Minister Evan Wolfe to provide the legislature's public accounts committee with the sales voucher for a 1969 Mustang involved in a claim made by Kerster's old company, Surrey Dodge Ltd.

Public accounts is enquiring into the ICBC controversy that involves separate claims being paid to Surrey Dodge and a New Westminster individual after Kerster intervened on their behalf.

COCKE
. . . wants voucher

The police and ICBC are also investigating the matter.

Cocke said that if Wolfe is prepared to see that nothing is hidden in the Surrey Dodge case he will make the (Mustang) sales voucher available to the public accounts committee.

But Wolfe, who was asked the same question last week, refused to make a reply.

Last week Wolfe had said the Automobile Insurance Act forbids the release of such information.

"Is he going to hide behind the act?" asked Cocke.

Again Wolfe refused to respond.

"Well, we can draw our own conclusion on that then," said Cocke.

Later outside the house, the NDP MLA said that he believes the sales tax voucher will show that Surrey Dodge sold the Mustang for less than the value they placed on it in making their claim to ICBC.

"That's the only reason he could be hiding the voucher," said Cocke, "why the hell else would he hide that?"

Surrey Dodge claimed nearly $3,000 worth of repairs to the car which was stolen from their lot in June 1975, but ICBC estimated the car's total worth as only $1,500-$2,000.

After a lengthy dispute ICBC paid the dealership $1,850 (In April, 1977) despite the fact that the car had been repaired and sold before insurance adjusters saw it.

Belgian to Visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Belgian Prime Minister Leo Tindemans will meet with President Carter Sept. 8 in Washington, the White House announced Monday. Tindemans will be visiting the U.S. in his roles of prime minister and president of the European Community.

VICTIMS PORTLAND LAWYERS

AGASSIZ (CP) — Police have identified two Portland, Ore. lawyers as the two men killed Sunday when their light plane crashed on a mountainside north of this Fraser Valley community.

Richard Welden, 61, and Lloyd Weiser, 67, were killed in the crash, while Weiser's wife Olive 61, who has multiple sclerosis, was injured and later airlifted to Chilliwack General Hospital.

The search started after police were notified by Weiser's daughter Cheryn, 27, who wrapped her mother in a blanket then crawled from the crash site to a road where a passing motorist gave her a ride to a local ranger station.

Municipal Amendment Act Delay Proposal Defeated

The government majority Monday easily defeated a motion in the legislature to delay passage of the Municipal Amendment Act for six months.

The NDP, which proposed the delay, said the government should use the extra six months to consult with municipalities about the proposed changes.

The NDP motion failed by a vote of 25 to 12.

The NDP is particularly opposed to Section 28 of the bill which would insert a new section into the act giving municipal affairs minister Hugh Curtis power to rewrite part or all of any municipal or regional bylaw which he feels is "contrary to the public interest."

Lorne Nicolson (NDP—Nelson-Creston) said this clause is "a statement of loss of faith in municipal officials."

Bob Skelly (NDP—Alberni), who made the motion, said the municipalities would like the opportunity to debate the proposed amendments next month at the annual convention of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

TRAVEL BANNED

The forests ministry has ordered a ban on travel in the Penticton Creek and Ellis Creek watersheds adjacent to Penticton because of the high forest fire hazard.

The ministry said in a news release that effective midnight Monday night until further notice, the restriction prohibits any person from "hiking, hunting, berry picking, prospecting, surveying, timber cruising or any other activities in the area."

BIG CARS ARE COMING DOWN TO VOLVO'S SIZE...NOT UP TO VOLVO'S STANDARDS.

Have you noticed how some of the fat cars have reduced to almost Volvo-esque proportions? It's true. One major manufacturer has cut the size of his oversize models by an average of 700 pounds. But try as they might to copy our lines, they haven't managed to duplicate our features.

Standard equipment like four-wheel power-assisted disc brakes. And a dual braking system in which each circuit operates on three—not two—wheels. Plus orthopedically-designed bucket seats. And a 12-outlet heating/ventilation system. They're on every Volvo we sell or lease. But they're absent from Detroit's slimmed-down models.

Then there are the little things Volvo owners have come to expect which other car buyers expect to pay extra for.

All of which suggests it doesn't make much sense to buy a sensible-size car unless there's a Volvo inside it. See us for both. © 1977 VOLVO CANADA LTD.

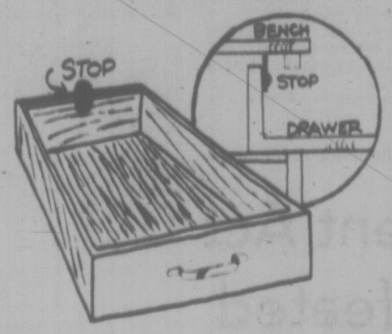
Install Drawer Stops



There'll be no more pulling packed drawers all the way out and dumping their contents on the floor if you take the time to add a stop to each sliding mini-storage chest.

Screw a small block of wood to the inside or front surface of each drawer's back panel. The little stop should be located so it sticks up high enough to hit the inside of the cabinet's front, thereby preventing the sliding box from coming completely out.

Be sure, though, to use a screw rather than nails or glue to hold the stop in place. That way, you can always reach in and remove the block with a screwdriver whenever you do want to take the drawer all the way out of the cabinet.

Acute-Care Nurses Hinder The Aged, Studies Show

By TONY MacGREGOR
Canadian Press

The medical profession is taking a new look at care of the aged as research and studies indicate that some kinds of care create or aggravate the very problems they are designed to solve, says Vera McIver, director of the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society.

The society has pioneered the priory treatment method which emphasizes the restoration of health for the aged through paying careful attention to psychological and social needs as well as physical ailments.

Ms. McIver said that historically the big problem with care of the aged has been the application of the traditional acute-care hospital philosophy.

"Most of the problems associated with the aged such as senility are caused by a poor environment rather than an organic breakdown."

With the best of intentions, the professional health disciplines helped create the so-called aging process because nursing homes were staffed with acute-care nurses whose attitudes and training hindered rather than helped the healing process.

In the past, she said, nurses were trained to hide their personalities and concentrate solely on healing physical ailments.

"We were always taught not to get emotionally involved with the patients because they had their own problems."

Hospitals served the interests of the health-care professions rather than the needs of the patients.

"Why was it necessary to permit visiting only between, say, 3 and 4 p.m.? It was to make things easier for the hospital staff."

As the importance of the psychological and social needs of the aged were realized, attitudes began to change.

In the priory treatment method, non-professional workers are considered to be as important as professionals.

"Every member of the hospital staff is on the team," said Ms. McIver. "We have had to break down the elitism of the professions."

The Juan de Fuca Hospital Society operates four hospitals in the Victoria area and has a ratio of about four non-professionals to every professional.

"If the staff is to function as a therapeutic force, it must be psychologically healthy and satisfied," said Ms. McIver. "If the staff members aren't getting the ego-enhancing experiences they need, they won't be able to give the affection and care that the elderly need."

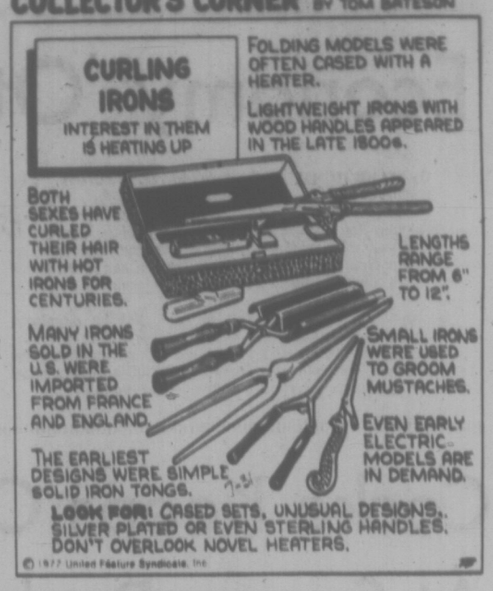
The hospital, she said, has to strive to create an ideal physical and social environment.

"Sometimes the staff has to become the extended family for the patient because the family is an important part of the healing process. Staff members are encouraged to bring their own families into the hospital."

Recently a class of Grade 6 students spent a semester of home economics classes in one of the Juan de Fuca hospitals with a resulting therapeutic effect on both the young and old.

"The teacher said some of the problem children adjusted better and were asking to come back to see the elderly people."

COLLECTOR'S CORNER* BY TOM BATESON



FREE FOR THE ASKING

By HARRIET HART

Gardening can be a source of great satisfaction and arthritics don't have to forego this delightful hobby, if they adopt special gardening methods and use specially designed tools.

The folder Facts For The Gardener With Arthritis is packed with practical advice. It says, for instance, that for an ambulatory arthritic the ideal height for a garden bed is 34 cm. (34 inches); for those in a wheelchair it would be 60 cm. (24 inches).

The folder also points out that plants growing on a trellis are easier to reach and maintain than those on the ground, because bending can be avoided. Such plants include some types of roses, small fruit and flowering vines.

Tools for arthritics should be lightweight and adapted for use with both hands to minimize stress on the joints. Plastic watering cans are best, especially when they are carried only half filled. Also, plastic pots are preferable to earthen ones for planting.

Hobby gardening, whether you are healthy or disabled, should be paced according to your endurance. If, after gardening you have painful joints for more than two hours, you have overdone it.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel: We have moved from the city to the beach. Our older plants are "freaking out." We want to get some new large plants rather than furnishings. What do you recommend for beach conditions — W.S.

Dear W.S.: Your older city plants are freaking out because of the change. The conditions at the beach are so different from the city — light, air, humidity, energy — everything has changed for them. In time they will readjust happily to their new environment and begin to grow like mad.

As long as the plants are not in direct sunlight just about anything will grow at the beach indoors. All the plants that frustrated you in the city — ferns, piggyback, coleus — will be fine at the beach.

As for larger plants, Schefleras (not that many problems with mites in the cool beach air), Ficus benjaminas, palms will do great. Try cactus and succulents, especially where the light is intense.

Common ¢ents

By KATE MacQUEEN

When your wood floors become damp in humid weather, the boards can expand so that edges rub together and squeak. A national oak flooring association recommends sifting a small amount of talcum powder or powdered graphite between the squeaky boards. Or a little liquid wax may do the job. These expedients are a lot less expensive than having a repairman tighten the flooring from underneath.

Arteriosclerosis

your health

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D.

Do all the arteries in the body develop arteriosclerosis in the same degree? I want to know about this because some close members of my family have had some heart attacks and one had a stroke. — Mr. D.K.

Dear Mr. K.:

When arteriosclerosis affects the arteries of the body the signs and symptoms may vary. If the narrowing occurs in a small blood vessel, the effects are more readily visible than if the narrowing occurs in a large blood vessel. For example, the coronary arteries to the heart, when narrowed, may lead to more trouble than the narrowing of a larger artery that brings blood to the legs.

It is also an interesting observation that some blood vessels may be entirely free from arteriosclerotic changes while others in the body are affected. A number of theories exist about this, but none has been thoroughly accepted.

I add a note of great hope. Elaborate surgical procedures have made vascular surgery one of the wonders of our present generation. It is now possible to ream out arteriosclerotic patches from within an artery, to increase the flow of blood.

It is also possible to by-pass blocked arteries with Dacron grafts. Veins taken from another part of the body can replace arteries closed by arteriosclerosis.

Surgery done under an operating miscroscope now makes possible delicate procedures that once were considered formidable and almost impossible.

* * *

Is there a difference between arthritis and rheumatism? — Miss J.F.

Dear Miss F.:

Although they are technically different, the terms are sometimes used interchangeably by the laity. Physicians make a definite distinction.

Rheumatism applies to acute and chronic conditions that are associated with stiffness and soreness of the muscles and with pains in the joints.

Arthritis is an actual inflammation of the joints, accompanied by pain, tenderness and later the changes within the joints themselves.

Both rheumatism and arthritis can be the result of infection, injury or gout. In both conditions there are perhaps 15 or more subdivisions based on the suspected cause, the duration, the severity and the permanence of the changes within the joints.

Careful history-taking by the doctor, coupled with blood studies and X-rays, establish the diagnosis exactly. Then and only then can the proper treatment be established.

GREEK PASTITSA

- 1 lb. ground beef
- ½ cup chopped onion
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- 1 28-ounce can tomatoes
- 1 5½-ounce can tomato paste
- ¼ teaspoon cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 2 cups cooked macaroni (1 cup or 4 ounces uncooked)
- 3 tablespoons fat
- 3 tablespoons flour
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup skim milk powder
- 1½ cups water
- 1 beaten egg

Brown beef until fat coats pan. Add onion and garlic; saute until onion is transparent. Drain off excess fat. Add tomatoes, tomato paste, seasonings and sugar. Simmer uncovered 1 hour, stirring occasionally.

Layer one cup macaroni in greased 8-inch square pan. Pour tomato sauce over macaroni and top with remaining macaroni. Melt fat. Blend in flour, seasonings and skim milk powder. Gradually add water. Stir and cook until smooth and thick.

Blend small amount of hot mixture into egg, then stir egg into remaining hot mixture. Stir and cook 1 minute more. Pour over macaroni. Bake 45 minutes at 350 degrees F. Let stand 20 minutes before cutting. Six servings.

Mockingbird Song Ends on Up Beat

DEAR ABBY: I am the man who wrote to you about the mockingbird. My wife had loved that bird so much, she even recorded his song on tape. Then my wife died last year, and the bird returned. His song recalled so many memories, I felt that if I didn't destroy that mockingbird, I would surely go mad!

How grateful I was for your concern. You said time and faith in God would heal my broken heart, and you urged me not to harm the bird. Then you asked your readers to write in with suggestions and told me to watch your column.

Imagine my joy when on June 20th your entire column was filled with letters from others who had lived through a similar torment, offering suggestions to comfort me.

The best solution was to reenter the wonderful world of matrimony, and that's exactly what I have done! I recently married a beautiful woman, and all the loneliness and despair is behind me.

Thank you, Abby. Please sign me, FORMERLY DESPERATE, NOW BLESSED, or . . . — RALPH

DEAR RALPH: Thank you for letting me know that the advice from my readers helped you. Self-pity and dwelling on an irretrievable loss is for the birds. Good luck to you both.

DEAR ABBY: I am the editor and publisher of the Daytona Beach Morning Journal, which has carried your column for many years. I couldn't believe my eyes when I read your quote: "Emerson said, 'Pay every debt like God wrote the bill'."

I knew that Emerson never in the world would have written such a line, so I looked up the quotation and sure enough it read, "Pay every debt AS IF God wrote the bill."

Abby, how could you?—HERBERT M. DAVIDSON

DEAR MR. D.: I plead guilty as charged.

Will you settle for a "mea culpa" and a promise to be more careful in the future?

DEAR ABBY: Our 12-year-old daughter received a lipstick for her birthday. Should she be allowed to use it, even though her father objects?—WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: No. Parents make the rules for their children. (If someone gave her a motorcycle, would you allow her to drive it?)

Girlwatchers Looking Cheerful At Sundress Return

NEW YORK (NYT) — The noontime giirl watches, perched like birds around office buildings, are looking more cheerful these days. They lost their view of legs when the mini became passe, and things got pretty boring. Now they have a lot of delectably tanned shoulders to whistle at.

Women have always liked the comfort and flattery of the sundress, but not since the 1940's have there been so many around. They are, of course, part of the fashion movement toward freer, softer clothes. And there's another consideration: The sundress usually costs less than a dress with sleeves, and that's a point this year when a cotton dress may carry a price tag in three figures.

"I feel cool; I feel pretty," said Ann Myers, a secretary who bought her flower-sprigged dress at Bloomingdale's, "and I can always put a shirt under it and wear it as a jumper."

The classic sundress has a straightcut camisole top and shoulder straps, but there are many variations on the theme. It can be completely strapless and held up by a drawstring at the top, like the airy Missoni worn by Becky Jones, an interior designer, or the shocking-pink jersey on young Mary Jean Cherry, a visitor from Pennsylvania.

To make a sundress truly 1977, you wear it with bobby socks and high heels. Kim Gilinger, a hairdresser, laughed and explained that she bought her white tent dress and little white socks two years ago.

But then Miss Gilinger's boss is Jean-Louis David, the Paris hairdresser, and the salon is in Bendel's, so she's exposed to the avant garde.

On 59th Street, Fiorucci's windows were full of cotton sundresses, tagged at the remarkable price of $10, and the dressing rooms were busy. Patrizia D'Orsaneo, a visitor from Italy, tried a size 10, then an 8. Her escort preferred the tighter one. Amber de Lallata, an airline stewardess, took an armful of the dresses to try on. "They're such a good buy — I can use some cool things," she said.

COTTON VERSUS BLENDS —DENIM FIGHT IS ON

NEW YORK (AP).— Calling it the first big improvement in years, most denim manufacturers are gearing up to go blended and some think the days of 100-per-cent cotton denim are numbered.

"In making this blend we found we could accomplish what our customers wanted us to accomplish," said Larry Addison of Swift Textiles, which will be producing only blended denim by the end of the year. "The advantage is that if you buy a Size 7, it will stay a Size 7."

Blended denim has stirred a small controversy with the cotton growers and Cotton Inc. has mounted an advertising campaign against adding synthetics to denim, noting that it takes five or six times more energy to make a pound of polyester, which is petroleum-based, than to make a pound of cotton.

Polyester advocates counter that if you have to weed it or feed it, the fibre costs too much.

There will be an extensive TV and radio campaign supporting the "virtues of 100-per-cent cotton as the true denim," said Don Kleckner, vice-president, marketing services, of Cotton Inc.

"Cotton Inc. is telling people to look at the label," he said. "That's what they've been getting, been satisfied with and if they want the traditional type of denim jeans or new neat look, they can get them in regular 100-per-cent cotton or the new 100-per-cent cotton with the new shrinkreduction finish, Sanforset, that overcomes shrinkage."

Although some mills have been making a synthetic denim for years, it has only been in the last 18 months that they have developed a mixture they consider suitable, industry sources say. "In the early days we coudn't get total dyeability," noted Ben Sampson of Cone Mills.

In the new fabric, which is 65-per-cent cotton and 35-per-cent polyester, the cotton is forced to the outside of the yarn when it is spun so that the finished product takes dye and feels like cotton, the manufacturers explain.

Although all of the seven top mills are experimenting with blended fabrics, some are still cautious about its acceptance. "I doubt if we ever will go entirely to the blend," said Brian Clarke of Burlington Industries. "There are still a lot of people who want cotton."

Canton Textiles is continuing to make only cotton denim, although it is now running blend samples. "If the markt demands blends, we can make them," said spokesman Jim Wheeler.

Both Burlington and Canton are using similar chemical processes to give cotton denim an easy-care finish and to reduce shrinkage, but they admit this is more costly than going synthetic.

Finding What Bugs The Bugs

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Scientists hope to find out what makes mosquitoes and other disease-carrying bugs sick — and use it to put them out of commission permanently.

"Even the lowliest creatures get sick," Western Illinois University biologist Sam Singer told a conference of biologists at Michigan State University Monday. "We want to see if we can harness that to our advantage."

Singer is working with World Health Organization scientists in an effort to isolate bacteria, viruses or other micro-organisms that kill insects.

Researchers already have found a bacteria that kills mosquito larvae without harming the environment. Singer said he expects it to be commercially available and deployed by W.H.O. within three years.

Singer said such germ warfare against insects would be safer than the use of pesticides because the micro-organisms used only would attack the specific pests against which they are aimed.

60-Day Break Called in Coal Strike

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (WP) — Top leaders of the United Mine Workers Monday ordered a temporary halt to a wildcat strike that has crippled Appalachian coal production for two months. Local union leaders representing the strikers promptly bowed to the order.

But the union's top officials threatened to call a nationwide coal strike in 60 days if cutbacks in miners' health benefits — the immediate cause of the work stoppages by as many as 85,000 miners in five states since mid-June — are not restored in the meantime.

Previous back-to-work orders have been ignored by the militant miners, but union leaders expressed confidence that this one would be heeded. "It gets the men back to work and it buys us some time," said one official.

The agreement came at the end of a stormy six-hour meeting between the UMW International Executive Board and officials of the Charleston-based District 17, the union's largest and most militantly pro-strike district.

UMW officials said after the closed meeting at the Daniel Boone Hotel here that the frequently divided executive board voted unanimously to order the strikers back to work for a 60-day period, during which the union would attempt to negotiate a settlement of the benefits dispute with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, the industry's bargaining arm.

If settlement is not reached within the 60-day period, UMW officials said the contract between the UMW and BCOA would be terminated and a nationwide coal strike would be called.

The 60 days would run until just six weeks before the three-year contract expires on Dec. 6. Even before the current wave of wildcat strikes, dissension within the faction-ridden UMW led many industry and government observers to predict that the union and coal operators could not agree on a new contract without a strike, possibly a protracted one.

About 200 representatives of district 17 met after the executive board adjourned and endorsed the back-to-work agreement with "minimal dissent," according to district president Jack Perry.

Israelis Use U.S. Arms For Lebanese Christians

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. state department said Monday that Israel has been using U.S.-supplied arms in support of Christian forces in southern Lebanon, but that this does not violate U.S. laws.

Spokesman John Trattner said "Israel informed us, but did not consult us" on its use of American weapons. Trattner would not say what weapons or military operations werere involved, but Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin announced earlier this month that Israel has provided artillery support to Christian militiamen who are fighting with Palestinian forces.

Under U.S. arms export laws, Israel and other nations obtaining U.S. military equipment must agree to use it only for such purposes as self-defence and internal security. The state department has concluded that the Israeli operations in southern Lebanon can be classified as self-defence, according to informed sources.

U.S. PRIME RATE RISING TO 7%

NEW YORK (AP) — Bank of America joined with several other major banks today in following the lead of the Citibank in raising the prime interest rate to seven per cent from 6¾.

Observers predicted a round of increases Friday after Citibank raised its prime rate to seven per cent. Citibank usually takes the lead in prime-rate increases.

Chase Manhattan, Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York and Chemical Bank, the third-through-sixth largest banks in the U.S., announced rises to seven per cent today, along with First National Bank of Boston, Irving Trust, Mellon, Pittsburgh National, Seattle First National, United California and United Jersey Banks.

Data Check Delays Rocket

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Space scientists have postponed for two days the launch of another Voyager toward the outer planets, looking for a possible flaw in computer programming that troubled the robot explorer launched Saturday.

Voyager 2 — launched first — sped on course toward Jupiter today, and mission controllers at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory planned to send a command to give its navigational system a second lock to keep it on track.

The 1,775-pound spacecraft already had a fix on the sun, which stabilizes the craft's pitch and yaw, and the lock on Canopus, brightest star in the southern hemisphere, will control roll.

NASA scientists decided to postpone the launch of Voyager 1 from Sept. 1 to Sept. 3 while they track down the source of problems that followed Saturday's launch. A gyro and a data processor appeared to malfunction for several hours and the spacecraft did not signal that the main boom carrying television cameras and scientific instruments had fully deployed, although it apparently extended as planned, or close to it.

NASA spokesmen said Monday that if the troubles were caused by faulty computer programming, as suspected, the on-board computers can be reprogrammed.

"We have confirmation that all other booms and antennas have been properly deployed," said Maynard Hine, a JPL staff assistant.

"But we want to find out why computers haven't confirmed that the main strut has been locked into place. We know it is close to full extension.

"We want to fully understand the implications so the same thing doesn't happen to the second Voyager."

NASA spokesmen said analysis of telemetry data showed the spacecraft was subjected to rough handling when the final rocket motor kicked in during the launch, and when the 15,000 pound rocket was separated by explosive bolts after it burned out.

The jolts may have caused the computer problems, they said, and the rocket motor on the other Voyager is being checked over thoroughly.

Nixon's Presents Hunted

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Protocol chief Evan Dobell will go to court Wednesday to seek permission to search 200 packing cases containing material from the Nixon presidency in hopes of finding a number of missing gifts from foreign leaders, the state department says.

A department spokesman said Monday there are unresolved questions concerning the whereabouts of gifts from foreign governments to Richard Nixon and his family during his presidency.

Dobell has asked Joel Solomon, head of the general services administration, which has the packing cases, to make an inventory of the gifts to the Nixons in its possession, the spokesman said.

Carter to Pay For 'Free' Flights

WASHINGTON (WP) President Carter will reimburse the National Bank of Georgia from both campaign and personal funds for the cost of five flights Carter took in 1975 and 1976 on NBG's corporate airplane, White House press secretary Jody Powell said Monday.

The total cost of the flights has $1,793. At least $865 of that amount will be reimbursed from Carter campaign funds and the remainder from the President's personal funds, Powell said.

Questions about Carter's use of the NBG plane arose in connection with the comptroller of the currency's investigation into the personal financial dealings of budget director Bert Lance, former president of the bank.

Powell said that bank records showed five flights by Carter on the plane. Powell said officials were checking to determine whether the flights were for campaign purposes, and if so, whether the bank was reimbursed for use of the plane.

The federal election law requires such a reimbursement for campaign flights on private aircraft.

The press secretary said the fact that none of the flight costs were reimbursed initially was an oversight, and not a deliberate attempt to circumvent the election law.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ♡
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♡.

After winning the opening lead with his ace of hearts, East returned the queen of hearts to South's king. A trump was next led to dummy's king, after which a trump was played back to South's ace. When West discarded a heart on the second trump lead, East was revealed as the possessor of a sure trump trick.

On the face of it, it seemed as though the four-spade contract was doomed to defeat, since South also had a loser in both clubs and diamonds. But the club loser disappeared.

South's next play was the ace of diamonds, and this was followed by a diamond to the board's king. Now the ten of diamonds was led, West taking the trick with his jack. West naturally returned a club, for if he played a heart or a diamond, it would be ruffed in dummy while simultaneously South would discard his losing club. West's club return was captured by dummy's king.

South next cashed dummy's club ace, felling East's queen. A trump was next led off the board, putting East into the lead. East, with only hearts remaining in his hand, was forced to lead this suit. South discarded thereon his losing club, as he ruffed the trick in dummy. The rest of the tricks were his, with his only losers being a trump, a heart and a diamond.

Of course South was lucky in finding East with only two clubs. Had he possessed a third club, the lead of that suit when he obtained the lead with his trump queen would have resulted in South's defeat.

But, then, East didn't figure to have more than two clubs. He had overcalled in hearts, and had shown up with three trumps and three diamonds. And so South deserved the victory for having played the hand as he did.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, August 24

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on civic duty, public relations, corporate structure, where you stand and how to elevate your position. Capricorn figures prominently. You may learn of travel plans. Be flexible. Special honor is due — deserved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good Moon aspect for you coincides with journey, enlightenment. Sagittarian is in picture. You're able to locate missing article. Research pays dividends. Good news comes from afar. Maintain steady pace.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on finances in connection with partner or mate. Be ready for quick changes, decisions which affect basic security. Be thorough. Eschew superficial judgments; search for hidden meanings. You are due to make profitable discovery.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Neglect of legal matters could be expensive. Check rights, permissions. Accent on family member who wants to make a move. Key is to be lenient, diplomatic. You aid yourself — and others — by making intelligent concessions. Taurus, Libra persons figure in scenario.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): What you are seeking could be closer than you imagine. One who cares about you wants you to succeed and to be happy — will provide key material. Pisces, Virgo, Sagittarius persons could figure prominently. Your work, employment — special services associated with you — these take on a more distinct, brighter hue.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Relationships, other activities intensify — nothing is lukewarm. It is all or nothing, financial and emotional involvement. Capricorn is in picture. Sweeping changes occur. Creativity pays off — it also would be wise to organize, to settle monetary questions at the outset.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Conclusions are reached, deals solidified — get appraisals, be rid of "white elephant." Aries is in picture. Accent on home, property, one of parents, agreement to strive for better display, production, distribution. Another Libra has some ideas concerning decoration.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Movement, journeys, relatives, messages and visits help make this a busy time. Stress confidence, independence, originality and creativity. Stand tall. Don't be sold short. Accent on ideas which can be transformed into viable concepts. Leo, Aquarius figure in scenario.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Spotlight on what you can earn, taxes, deductions, a greater understanding of personal financial situation. No one intends to give you something for nothing, not product or service. Grow up about it and be happier — and more affluent — as result. Do it!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Move ahead, spread influence, be confident, socialize, follow through on hunch. Lady luck takes a liking to you. Highlight the way you look, your personality — and make personal appearances. You can do plenty now — and this includes valuable contacts, earning more and being happier.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You gain rare insights. You are taken into confidence by persons who, themselves, are searchers, seekers, who usually find what they need. Be thorough — don't give up something of value for nothing. Another Aquarian — and a Scorpio — could figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on romantic interests, money from business enterprise, standing in community, career. Some friends aid in fulfilment of hopes and wishes. Yes, do accept changes. Analyze people and motives. Deal with Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons.

IF AUGUST 24th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you have unusual voice, a "sweet tooth," sense of destiny, of personal worthiness. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. In October, you meet people, go places and feel free to express yourself. In September, emotions dominate — and you could fall madly in love.

GARDENING

Every Plant Has Its Own Story

When a plant has a certain habit peculiar to itself and to no other plant, it makes an interesting garden subject regardless of its splendor or size.

Such a plant becomes a conversation piece. Even a drab garden can be a most entertaining garden when the peculiarities of each plant are known by the gardener and are told to all who visit.

This is where the smart gardener really shines. The garden may not be the largest nor contain the most expensive layout, but when the gardener knows the story of every plant and tells it to each visitor, it becomes a garden of great interest.

When you meet some of those visitors a month or so later in your own garden they will recount the story of several plants as it was told them by the smart gardener.

When buying plants some gardeners profess no interest whatever in the names or any facts concerning the plants. They even tear off the name tags and throw them away, and phone the nurseryman two years later for some information on "that plant I bought from you".

The story of a plant, its history, or the history of its finder, some particular habit it has that is not readily apparent, is as interesting to a visiting gardener as the plant itself, and sometimes more so.

Some plants open their blooms at precisley the same time every day while others are just as regular in closing.

Certain flowers are so sensitive to air temperature that a difference of one degree determines whether the blooms will be open or closed. A visitor is fascinated when the gardener casually remarks that the temperature is not yet 10 degrees otherwise that flower would be wide open.

Many gardeners assume that all spike flowers open from the bottom of the spike to the top, but that is not so. Some plants with flower spikes make the entire spike of buds first then open the blooms from the top downwards, retaining each bloom until they all are open.

The few plants that do this show color for many weeks as compared with those that start dropping blooms before the whole spike has opened.

Facts of this nature are worth gathering when you buy plants for the garden because they incite greater interest in each plant as well as increasing its garden value through the conversational potential.

A guide to a plant hunting expedition, named Angelo, had seen a small daffodil on a previous trip to the area, and spent a week seeking its location.

Just as it was decided he must be mistaken or in the wrong location he spotted the yellow bloom, rushed to it, fell on his knees with tears streaming down his cheeks.

The plant was listed as "Angelo's Tears" until its identity was established. We still grow that plant in our gardens under the common name of Angel's Tears, and wonder why the name, but when we know the story of frustration that led to the name we have greater appreciation of the plant itself.

Any nurseryman will be pleased to tell you if you show interest when making a purchase. Plant encyclopedias list unusual habits of growth and flowering. Books on plant hunters and plant hunting expeditions are a fund of information, and are found in most libraries.

When a gardener professes to have no interest in the story of the plant being purchased, saying that as long as it grows that is all that matters, one of the greatest thrills of gardening is being missed.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale, start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Bra Holsters Latest Rage

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — When Annie gets her gun in South Africa she may reach for her bra.

Or, for that matter, make a quick draw from a chamois leather holster round a dainty ankle.

The pistol-packing women of this white-run republic are increasingly concerned about rape, robbery and riot and are finding ingenious places to hide their means of self-defence—the handgun.

"One discreet spot to put one is alongside the bra-strap under the armpit," says fashion designer Peter Soldatas.

"I've had quite a few inquiries about bra holsters," Soldatas said, pointing to a shapely model being fitted for a .22-calibre pistol alongside her brassiere. He has so far made four bra-holsters and several more customers are booked for fittings.

"We have actually made a silver lame bra-holster to match a silver-plated pistol, but it could be dangerous. I'm waiting for the first customer to get a nipple shot off," he said.

South Africa rates as one of the most gun-happy countries in the world with an estimated 1.3 million guns of various kinds in a population of 4,350,000 whites.

Many of them are held by women, spurred on to buy a gun by last year's bloody Soweto riots, an average of 239 violent assaults each day and some 15,000 rape cases a year.

And as South Africa's 18 million blacks issue increasingly insistent calls for power, the embattled whites, particularly Afrikaaners, seem certain to dig in behind strong defences.

"I don't think anyone is going to mess with me when they see how I shoot," said 22-year-old Anne Coetzee after pumping five rounds with deadly accuracy into the heart of a paper target at Gun City, an indoor shooting range in the heart of Johannesburg.

Gun City, a converted cinema opened last year, caters to women of all ages who like to practise pistol shooting during their lunch hours.

"I come in here about two or three times a week for half an hour just to keep my eye in," Anne said. "I've been shooting since I was a teenager, but with the troubles in the townships, I think it could also come in useful for self-defence."

"After the riots we started getting a lot more women coming in," said Maisie, the manageress of Gun City. "They are from all ages, from grannies to teen-agers."

A visit to Gun City showed how dedicated to their shooting women can be. A half-dozen young housewives swapped notes about their favorite calibres and ammunition.

"They have all kinds of guns," Maisie said. "But we draw the line at armor-piercing bullets. They are not allowed to use them here."

She said South Africans expect to pay about 450 rand ($550) for a gun. Ammunition can cost up to 25 rand ($31) for 100 rounds. A target, standard world issue showing a pistolpacking man in black on a white background, costs 40 cents (52 cents) and half an hour's blazing away at Gun City one rand 50 cents (about $2).

Despite the gung-ho spirit of Gun City with its permanent smell of burnt cordite, the large number of guns in circulation presents a serious problem for the country.

According to recent figures, 154,000 gun licences have been granted to South Africans in the last two years and there are no regulations governing a gun purchaser's ability to use a firearm before he buys one.

The trigger-happy tradition seems likely to be handed down to South Africa's next generaton.

High Truck Prices? "NEGATORY!" PETER POLLEN FORD

EVENING OUT WAS SMASHING

CALGARY (CP) — Jim Dickie, 19, was driving home early last Saturday when he was in a traffic accident. And then anotner. And another.

Dickie received cuts to head and legs. Police drove him downtown where he made a statement.

A patrol car was then ordered to take him to hospital for treatment.

Within seconds of leaving police headquarters, a motorist shot through a red light.

"I couldn't find the breath to say anything," Dickie said Monday. "I just hung on for dear life."

"I wrenched my neck in that episode," Dickie said.

After being told he would have to wait an hour to see a doctor, he decided to go home. He caught a cab outside.

I had just finished telling the driver my troubles when a car went through a stop sign directly in front of us," he said.

"We had no chance of avoiding a pileup and there I was, smack in the middle of my third crash of the night."

The taxi came to rest on a lawn, facing backwards. Dickie received a bump on the head and bruises on both hands.

Someone called a cab to drive him home. After some persuasion, he agreed to take it.

'TO ENSURE FREE SOCIETY'

Police Chiefs Talk Tough

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Canadian police chiefs want vagrancy laws restored, restricted access to "subversive" literature and pornography and an outright ban on politically subversive groups.

Jack Machan, president of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police, said in an interview Monday such steps are necessary "to ensure we continue with a free society."

Machan said Parliament made a mistake in 1972 by repealing certain sections of the Vagrancy provisions of the Criminal Code which made it an offence for someone to wander about penniless or to beg for money in a public place.

"We strongly objected to the move at the time," said Machan.

Machan said police generally want a much tougher stand taken on pornography and added books that deal with subversive political thought should also be subject to a kind of censorship review.

"I'm not saying we should censor all the literature entirely. Rather it should be available only for reading by adults and not just available to any person as is the case now," he said.

Machan said police also want strong legislation to deal more effectively with groups "whose mandate is the overthrow of the government."

Asked if that means a group such as the Marxist-Leninist Party of Canda, he replied, "Yes."

"There should be recognition of the group if its intent is to disturb the kind of society Canadians wish to live in," he said.

And if that is the aim of the group it should be outlawed, he said.

"We're talking about a free society but in that there is a requirement for us all to live in a law framework."

"Freedom is fine and it's what we're all after but there has got to be discipline. If there is no discipline there is no free society. We'd have anarchy."

Machan said the CACP can't expect all that it wants or asks but feels confident the government will restore the Vagrancy section.

Under the section, police had the authority to arrest anyone without any apparent means of support and who were unable to justify their presence in the place where they were found.

The section also prohibited begging from door to door and in public places and required a prostitute or night walker to "give a good account of herself" if stopped.

Machan said the law was an effective tool to clear the streets of crime.

Police now are powerless to act if they see suspicious persons on the street, he said, and the situation is particularly critical in congested metropolitan areas.

Machan acknowledged civil liberties groups would be up in arms if any of the legislative changes he proposes go through.

"But I think more people would be in favor of the changes than there would be against."

He said the CACP has a responsibility to speak out against laws senior police officials believe to be wrong.

But, he agreed police should not write the laws.

"If it came to that it'd be terrible," he said. "I think we might be just a little too tough."

MONTREAL FLIGHTS DISRUPTED

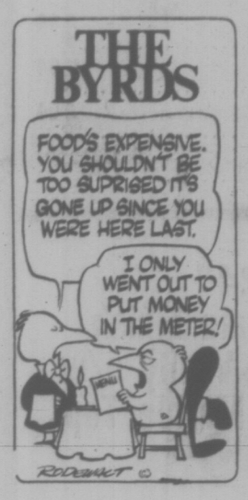
Vince paquette, a federal transport department spokesman, said there were delays of 15 to 20 minutes on some flights leaving the airport and on others arriving from Toronto where controllers were maintaining a work-to-rule campaign.

Air Canada said some of its planes were held up for 20 to 30 minutes.

Paquette confirmed that one air traffic supervisor has been suspended. He declined to identify the man or to give the reason for the suspension, but said an internal investigation was being held into the matter.

Crisis Talks in U.K. On Air Strike Threat



Times News Services

LONDON — Airport workers whose threatened strike would disrupt air service to more than one million passengers were called to a meeting today to discuss their grievances with Britain's top government labor official.

The 850-member Air Control Assistants union voted Monday 302-97 to strike for four days from midnight (4 p.m. PDT) Thursday until midnight Monday in support of their demands for a salary increase.

Employment Secretary Albert Booth summoned the leaders of the union, as well as members of management — the Civil Aviation Authority — to new talks.

Meanwhile, spokesman for Victoria travel agents differ on what's in store for local travellers bound for the U.K. if a strike set for Thursday by British air traffic controllers goes ahead.

Andy Blaney, of Blaney Travel Service Ltd., said no official word has yet been given but he expects airlines will fly passengers from Canada to Amsterdam, providing transport by train and ferry to London from there.

Blaney said official confirmation is expected later today.

Ian Dykes, manager of Featherstone Travel Service Ltd., however, said the Amsterdam airport may be too busy to handle any extra traffic.

"I believe the airlines will do the best they can, given the circumstances," he said.

Sue Bennett, manager of Budget Travel Ltd. said her main concern is the 171 clients they now have in Britain. Arrangements have been made to transport them to either Amsterdam or Brussels, or even Paris.

The company has 100 people leaving on a charter flight from Victoria on Sept. 1. If the strike is in effect they will be flown to either of the three continental airports and the return flight will bring back those now in Britain.

Blaney estimated that about 60 or 70 of his company's clients, bocked for charter flights, will be affected if the strike takes place this weekend, as well as another 20 booked on regular flights.

A charter, leaving Thursday, will be in the air when the strike is due to take place, he said.

Domestic and overseas airlines say in event of a strike they expect at least half of the 3,000 daily flights through British air space to be hit by cancellations or long delays.

Representatives of the 1,400 air traffic controllers and the 850 assistants will continue meeting through Thursday to sort out what the controllers should or should not do to avoid accusations of strike breaking.

Kerster Ouster Attempt Fails

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

NDP members of the legislature's public accounts committee failed today in a move to have Social Credit backbencher George Kerster (Coquitlam) suspended from the legislature.

At the end of hearings into Kerster's involvement and three claims against the Insurance Corp. of B.C., Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre) told the committee it is obvious Kerster was involved in a conflict of interest in the cases and had used his position as a government MLA to intimidate ICBC officials.

The claims involved one by Surrey Dodge Ltd., a company once run by Kerster and to which he still has financial ties and two by New Westminster driver Leslie Wood.

Wood's vehicle was financed by First Charter Financial Corporation, a New Westminster company that has made at least two loans to Kerster.

In testifying before the committee, Kerster described one of the directors of First Charter, W. H. Butler, as a personal friend.

Kerster also said that the financial company had made him loans to purchase a car and to buy property.

Lauk said those ties placed the MLA in a conflict of interest situation when he approached ICBC to press for a

Ottawa Plans Controls On Abusers of CBs

OTTAWA (CP) — The communications department is designing regulatory changes for citizens band (CB) radios in an attempt to clamp down on the "hard-core abusers" of radio airwaves, a department official said today.

The changes will be designed to provide tougher measures to deal with CB operators who monopolize the airwaves, use the wrong frequencies, deliberately and repeatedly disrupt the airwaves or use illegal amounts of power for their sets, the official said.

As well, tougher measures will be introduced to clamp down on the estimated 60,000 to 120,000 persons across the country who are illegally operating CB radio sets without a licence, he said. There now are more than 600,000 licenced CB operators.

The regulations are expected to be introduced in October or November, the official said.

The department also announced that starting Jan. 1, 1978, new CB licences will only be issued to operators who have radio equipment meeting tighter technical requirements.

However, CB operators, who have older equipment made under less stringent regulations, will be able to renew their licences without buying the newer equipment, the official said. About 90 per cent of the CB equipment now in use was made under the old regulations.

The tighter technical requirements were introduced to try to reduce the problem of terference CB radios can cause with television and ordinary radio sets, the official said.

RAIN SETS HYDRO POLES ON FIRE

A circuit failure cut power to parts of Langford and Colwood between 7 a.m. and 9 a.m., a B.C. Hydro spokesman reported.

Power was also out in Victoria West and a number of scattered locations.

The problems, which began around 1 a.m., were attributed to the light rain after a long, dry spell.

Dust gathers on insulators and this can sometimes cause an arc back to the pole, said the B.C. Hydro spokesman. The dust acts as a conductor.

Sebastian Cabot Dies at 59

Sebastian Cabot, the portly, bushy-bearded actor best known for his role as the benevolent butler in the television series Family Affair, died early today. He was 59.

He suffered a stroke, his third in three years, and died at the Deep Cove cottage he and his wife Kathleen have owned since 1963.

Cabot's last public appearance was in December at the McPherson Playhouse as part of a benefit for preservation of the White Cliffs of Dover.

The rotund actor, who had a reputation as a gourmet and collector of cars, had two strokes in 1974 which left his right side paralyzed and resulted in a loss of speech and memory.

In an interview last November with Max Low of the Times, he said he didn't think he would ever get his voice back "but I would still like to work."

He hoped someone would write a non-speaking part for him, "but nobody has."

Funeral services for Cabot will take place in Los Angeles where he and his wife have owned a home since 1960.

Cabot played the urbane Dr. Cyril Hyatt in the TV series Checkmate from 1959 to 1962. However, he was perhaps best known for his role as French, the staid but soft-hearted butler in Family Affair, a series about the trial of raising a family in New York City.

He was last seen as the English-accented host of the short-lived television anthology Ghost Story several seasons back.

"I went from Checkmate to Family Affair," he once said. "I was a brain in Checkmate and on Family Affair I was a sweet idiot."

"Sabby" Cabot was born in London on July 6, 1918. He left school at 14 to work as a garage helper. Later, he became a chef, because of what he called "internal urgings" and because his father pushed him into it.

He was a gourmet who loved rich foods like tripe, eel and sweetbreads and "couldn't care less for steak."

"I like to think of myself as a rather dashing figure, like Falstaff," he said at one time. "I've weighed 280 pounds since I was about 20 years old and I like it."

Cabot became interested in the theatre while chauffering British actor Frank Pettingell and talked his way into a repertory company by faking a long string of respectable credits. He soon began to get parts as a movie extra.

His first London stage role was in A Bell for Adano in 1945. Two years later, he came to the United States to appear in John Gielgud's New York production of Love for Love.

His other motion pictures included Seven Thieves, The Time Machine and The Family Jewels. He also had a long string of narration credits, including the Sword in The Stone, The Jungle Book, and Winnie The Pooh and Tigger Too, for Walt Disney.

Cabot is survived by his wife and three children — Annette, born in 1941, Christopher Pierre, born in 1943 and Yvonne, born in 1957.

10 KILLED IN BUS HIJACKING

Times News Services

MEXICO CITY — Mexican troops stormed a hijacked bus Monday and the two terrorists aboard started shooting passengers and exploded a hand grenade, killing 10 persons.

"It was butchery," said Alfredo Reyes, one of the 10 passengers wounded. "People fell like flies."

"We thought we were all going to be blown up when one of the men pulled the pin on the grenade and it blew up on his chest," said Primitivo Solis Romero, another passenger.

The hijackers, who identified themselves as members of the People's Armed Revolutionary Front, sought the release of two brothers who kidnapped U.S. Consul Terrance Leonhardy in Guadalajara on May 4, 1973, police said.

'MEANINGFUL WORK'

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Provincial prisoners are playing a major role in a successful salmon enhancement program on Vancouver Island.

This is the third year the enhancement program has been in operation.

It began when fisheries patroiman Fred Reder enlisted the help of the camp's principle officer, Bill (Scotty) McLeod. Reder, who's known as Radar by the townsfolk of Port Renfrew, says logger Maurice Tremblay reports that 35 miles of streams feeding the San Juan River have been cleared of huge log jams and other debris in the past three years, representing $200,000 worth of labor.

McLeod is enthusiastic about the co-operative program.

"From our point of view it's a meaningful work program. They're definitely helping the environment," he explained when the Times visited one of the work sites on Four Mile Creek.

★

In the shadow of a huge waterfall, the prisoners were clearing a path to the area in which an incubation box will be installed and operating by this fall.

The prisoners who work on the salmon program are volunteers and some of them took time out from clearing the stream of large boulders and debris to explain why they opt for this job.

One of them, Rick, gave up the chance of doing kitchen chores to work on the project. Kitchen duty is usually top on the priority list of camp chores because "you get all you can eat and get paid seven days a week" he said.

He described the project as helping to make the area "ecologically beautiful."

Strapped for funds, Reder describes himself as a "diplomat who carries a fish in his briefcase," using salmon given him to say thanks to those who help. Among them is the town's doctor, Ken Harris, who dropped by to lend a hand.

Reder's enthusiasm is contagious. The prisoners, for example, added an extra set of steps to the approaches of the incubation box site so that people can visit it easily.

Reder lives in a small Spartan cabin from mid-May to mid-October when he's on the job, commuting to his home at 1562 Rowan on the weekends.

Volunteer loggers have agreed to check on the incubation box, which will be fed from the waterfall, once Reder's duties for the year are ended.

Volunteers will also help Reder take the 80,000 eggs he expects to get from the spawning coho this fall.

Eating on the run — a cookie, slice of sausage and can of juice — Reder explained he often enlists the help of others to go on "drifts," traveling the 75 miles of waterways in an inflatable raft, checking the number of fish and chopping up logs so they can easily float away when the floods come.

Now the creek beds are drying and Reder spends hours rescuing fry and taking them to better areas. But Reder said the "drifts" are arduous, often encountering 10-foot waves along some of the reaches.

Because it takes longer than eight hours, the camp allows Reder to take prisoners on "drifts," camping overnight in the wilderness.

Reder's duties forbid clock-watching and sleep must often be savored in small stretches. In his drive to bring back the coho in large numbers, he has had to rationalize the priorities of his job.

"It's better to save thousands of fry than catch one sports fisherman who has gone over his limit," he says.

In the first year of operation, Reder said 100,000 fry were rescued. He hopes to install more incubation boxes next year.

The prisoners and people of Port Renfrew will be there to help.

As Tremblay explained: "We have the biggest coho in B.C. Where the average is 10 pounds anywhere else, ours are 15 pounds. We all want to see this thing work."

Tighter Road Rules For Horse Riders?

Horseback riders who travel Saanich roads could soon be facing tighter regulations.

The new regulations would be enforced through amendments to the municipality's streets and traffic bylaw.

The administrative traffic safety committee, headed by municipal engineer Cliff Warren, has contacted riding clubs asking for recommendations.

Barbara den Boer, secretary of the Vancouver Island Appaloosa Horse Club, reports her club is recommending all riders wear hard hats, that horses only be allowed to walk while ridden on a road, and that horses travel with the traffic flow, not against it.

The club also advocates that council establish a policy linking parks with trails to eliminate road travel, that signs be posted on roads used by riders as a warning to motorists. It also wants motorists restricted to 15 miles per hour while overtaking a horse and rider.

Warren said today he has yet to see the club's proposals but would be in favor of the mandatory wearing of hard hats, of travelling with the vehicular flow and of making riders travel in single file while on a roadway.

He was not in favor of the 15-mule-per-hour restriction because the roads are "for the use of traffic, not horses."

Warren said the bylaw is currently too loose, requiring only that a horse be properly saddled and bridled and under the control of its rider while travelling on roads.

"If two or three (riders) are abreast on the shoulder of a road there is nothing we can do about it," he said.

Warren said the need for tighter regulations became evident after a rider, travelling with companions, was thrown from a horse, sustaining several injuries. The rider was not wearing head protection.

Committee member Ald. Sandy Noel said today he is willing to sit down with club representatives to discuss the issue.

He pointed out that motorcyclists are required to wear hard hats as a safety precaution.

Details, he added, will be determined when the plan reaches the stage of local area consideration.

"We have an ongoing program but it won't be defined until we get into the local area planning," he said.

As an example, Laurenson said the municipality has bought property off West Saanich Road with a horse trail in mind.

MARILYN
. . . 21 years ago

Twenty-one years ago this evening 30,000 lined every Dallas Road vantage point to cheer 19-year-old Marilyn Bell as she completed her 17-mile swim across the Strait of Juan de Fuca in 10 hours and 38 minutes.

Waves of spectators — some waist-deep in the sea — surged along the shoreline as the Toronto swimmer touched land about 100 yards east of Finlayson Point. Before conquering the Strait, she was already an established swimmer. In 1954 she swam Lake Ontario and in 1955 became the youngest to swim the English Channel.

A cairn marks the spot on the pathway above the beach where Marilyn landed.

It was a week ago today that Elvis Presley died and record store manager Bill Neilsen is still trying to solve the mystery of the Calgary fan.

The man, in his early 30s, came into Treacher's Records one day before Elvis died — and bought Presley records by the armloads.

"It was an incredible sight," Nielsen said. "He had two copies and sometimes three copies of each album. It came to well over $200.

"At the time I assumed he was just a collector but then when Presley died the next day and records became scarce, I started thinking about it. The timing was rather strange."

If the Calgary man is still in town it would be interesting to hear if he has ESP or something.

Senior citizens in Greater Victoria are starting to organize. Thirty-seven character members got together on the weekend to form the Kiwanis Club for senior citizens.

Sponsored by the Oak Bay Kiwanis Club, the seniors have undertaken a project to assist the meals-on-wheels program which provides hot meals to shut-ins at a nominal cost.

President of the latest Kiwanis edition is Jack Irving and the secretary is Mel Zirul.

RADIUM LIKELY BURIED

A tiny tube of radium which disappeared from Royal Jubilee Hospital a month ago is probably deep in the Hartland Road garbage dump or deep in Juan de Fuca Strait.

Dr. A. C. Pickles, the hospital's executive director, said today that the Atomic Energy Commission and the radiation protection division of the provincial health department are convinced everything possible was done to find it.

The tube, about half the size of a wood match, vanished July 26 when a freak defect allowed it to drop from its container after being used in cancer treatment.

Pickles said he thinks it was likely swept up in the cleaning process or carried into the sewer system which dumps at sea.

The tube would only have been hazardous if it had come in direct contact with someone for a prolongued period, he added.

Inquest Set In Saanich Car Death

An inquest will open Wednesday night into the death of a 22-year-old Saanich man in a two-car collision at Scott and Ryan.

Steven Quan of 4927 Lemaire Place was pronounced dead less than a half-hour after the collision Sunday afternoon.

A passenger in his car, Donald Larson of 5156 Santa Clara, received only minor injuries while the driver of the other car, Barry Smith, 20, of 941 Kings was unhurt.

The inquest will be held at McCall's funeral chapel at 7:30 p.m.

Meanwhile, an 18-year-old Esquimalt youth who was critically injured in a motorcycle-car mishap last Tuesday, has died.

Lloyd Robert Moss of 1024 Bay died at 7:30 p.m. Monday in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Moss had just bought a new motorcycle and was giving his cousin a ride when he collided with a car driven by Jack White of 901 Garthland.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. I would like to know how the Foul Bay Road got its name?—W.J.S.

A. It's an historic name associated with the early maritime history of Victoria. Foul Bay, the other name for Gonzales Bay, signifies poor anchorage — a warning to mariners. The road connects up with the bay.

Q. How big is the Capital Regional District? P.S.D.

A. It has a total area of 934 square miles with a population of 224,600.

Even Gov't Taxed

The provincial government is not exempt from its own sales tax — a situation that has puzzled Saanich school trustees and inflated supply bids.

Monday the board opened tenders for kitchen equipment for a new school and found that the low bid was about $7,000 over the budgeted amount of $90,000.

The bid, however, included almost $6,000 for provincial sales tax.

The government pays about 60 per cent of the cost of the equipment under the capital financing formula, prompting board chairman Gerry Kristianson to comment it is "inquitous" that the government shares the funding and then takes $6,000 back in the form of social service tax..

Because the low bid is higher than the budget, provincial government approval is necessary before the tender can be awarded.

In other board business, trustee Norma Sealey is considering resigning her seat in mid-term in an effort to get school board elections to coincide with the biennial Sidney municipal elections.

But before she makes the move, she wants the minister of education to ensure the winner of the by-election will be able to sit for two years to dovetail with the Sidney elections.

PLANNERS EYE $6M HOTEL

A proposal for a major hotel costing about $6 million, to be built on property overlooking the Inner Harbor one block west of the legislative buildings, has been submitted to city planners and advisory committees for discussion.

The hotel of about 150 rooms would be built on the Bellevville-Oswego-Quebec-Pendray block by a Victoria-based group associated with Flag Inns, a chain of independently operated hotels in Australia and New Zealand.

Don Ray, managing director of two Gorge Road motels, the Coachman Inn and Canterbury Inn, and president of Flag Inns of North America, said today the principals in the proposed development are himself "and a group of Australians."

Technically, there is no obstruction in the path of the project because the property is already zoned for hotel-motel use.

But Ray and his architect, Ben Levinson of the Victoria firm Orme and Levinson, both said it will require "sensitive" treatment because located on the site are two former mansions which have been recommended for heritage designation.

The buildings are the tourist attraction known as Judge Hunter's Haunted House, 327 Belleville, and the Captain's Palace restaurant, 309 Belleville.

Preliminary plans call for the retention of the latter on its present site, but the relocation of the Hunter building to the western (Pendray) side of the block, where it would form part of a so-called "heritage precinct" of similar old homes.

A spokesman for the city's Heritage Advisory Committee said today the matter was discussed at the committee's meeting last week, and although members would prefer to see the building remain where it is they apparently had no strong objections to the move.

Ray said the future of another building on the property, the tourist attraction Land of the Little People, has not been determined. But he added: "If we can save it we probably will."

Levinson said the hotel building would be L-shaped in plan, wrapped around the Captain's Palace. It would have a "stepped back" design along the lines of the nearby Laurel Point condominium block, with a height of five or six storeys. Parking would be underground.
